Heat at 96 Causes One Death and 2 Prostrations

Ten Hurt in Traffic; Rain May Bring Brief Respite Here Later in Week

Relentless heat held Washington and the Nation tightly in its muggy grip yesterday and resulted directly or indirectly in one death and a number of near-disasters in this vicinity and at least 37 fatalities in other sections.

The mercury here returned to within 1 degree of Saturday's high of 97 and stayed well in the 90's in most of the country.

A Montgomery County, Md., man died of a heart attack induced by the heat, two men were prostrated and 10 persons were injured in traffic accidents.

In the Nation, 13 deaths were attributed directly to the hot weather and there were at least 20 drownings.

Rain in Sight This Week

No hope for relief was given by the weather forecaster here, but a possibility of rain in the middle of the week and perhaps a brief respite was forseen.

Yesterday's heat proved fatal to Garnett Koiner, 72, who collapsed at his fruit stand in Montrose, Md. Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, said his death was caused by a heart attack induced by the heat. Koiner was a brother-in-law of Miss Margaret Scherrer, chief deputy clerk of the county circuit court.

Other casualties included Gus R. Panknen, 53-year-old Washington Monument Guard, who collapsed in front of the shaft. He was treated by an ambulance physician and taken home.

Melvin Dent, of Hyattsville, was overcome during a golf game at the Beaver Dam Country Club in Montgomery County and brought to Casualty Hospital by the Riedensburg Rescue Squad.

Motor Boat Causes Injury

An outing on the water ended disastrously for Virgil S. Stegall, 34, of 310 Hamilton street northwest, when the propeller of his outboard motor struck an obstruction in Georgetown Channel. The motor was flung into the boat, the flywheel cutting a deep gash on Stegall's left forearm. He was rescued by a harbor police patrol boat and was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Though no drownings were reported in the Washington area, Dr. Frank Shipley, deputy medical examiner of Howard County, Md., said the body of a man believed to be a Washingtonian was found floating in Little Patuxent River, near Savage. A water-soaked identification card in a pocket indicated he was J. Grady Andrew, of 518 Massachusetts avenue northwest, where it was learned he had been missing several weeks. A brother at Nashville, Tenn., was notified.

Knox, Stimson To Urge Huge Defense Bill

Secretaries to Press For $4,848,171,957 Appropriation

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt's two Republican Cabinet members will make their first official appearances before Congress this week to ask approval of his proposed $4,848,171,957 defense appropriation.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of a House subcommittee which will start hearings today on the request, said Secretary Knox and top-ranking naval officials would be the initial witnesses.

Later, Secretary Stimson and War Department spokesmen will explain the Army's needs.

May Get Guard Request

The legislators, reassembling after the Democratic Convention, may get a request from Mr. Roosevelt for authority to order active duty for four divisions and some other units of the National Guard, about 50,000 men in all.

He and Stimson agreed ten days ago that this step should be taken, and it was indicated that a message on the subject would go to the Capitol when the legislators returned.

The Chief Executive asked the huge additional defense appropriation in a message on July 10. He recommended $2,161,441,957 in cash and $2,686,730,000 in contract authorizations.

Billion for Air Corps

The Navy Department would receive $936,176,540 to repair and expand numerous shore stations, increase armament and ordnance, and expand its airplanes.

The Army Air Corps would receive more than one-third of the $3,911,995,417 asked for the War Department.

Approval of the appropriation is expected, but action probably will be deferred until next week. Both Senate and House leaders have agreed upon a series of recesses this week to enable lawmakers to recuperate from the political conventions.

TVA Action Sought

Woodrum said he would press, however, for early House action on a $25,000,000 appropriation to expand TVA power facilities.

The power project was recommended by the National Defense Commission, and the Virginia Representative said delays on it or

Willkie Takes a Day Off; Biddle Defends Third Term

Solicitor General Answers Burke Attack on Radio

G. O. P. Candidate Rests in Preparation For Busy Week

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New Deal spokesmen and Republican opponents, reinforced by a Democratic bolter, clashed last night in a radio free-for-all that gave a Nation-wide audience a foretaste of the battle to come.

On the Administration side the issues were laid down by Solicitor General Francis Biddle, who charged the Republicans with being afraid to attack New Deal reforms, knowing that "the voters are all for them."

For Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, who bolted his party to support Wendell L. Willkie, the issue is the third term.

Sees Turning Point

"The decision made next November may well be the turning point which will settle once for all the kind of government which will prevail in the United States for generation to come," Burke declared.

C. Wayland Brooks, Republican Senatorial nominee from Illinois, struck at President Roosevelt's exercise of power over the Democratic National Convention, contrasted it with the "free" Republican Convention and found, in the President's domination, a parallel to the rise of one-man rule in Europe. He said:

"It was inconceivable that the free states of Europe would fall in scheduled time under the monstrous heel of military aggression . . . It was inconceivable that a Chief Executive of our free country would use the power entrusted to him to dictate not only his own renomination for a third term but also absolutely dictate the nomination of a hand-picked running mate to the exclusion of all other aspirants."

Others in Debate

Other participants in the debate, conducted by the American Forum of the Air, arranged by Theodore Granik, were Representatives Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, the majority leader; Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Patrick declared that "more important in this election than the third term is the question of whether there shall be a return to the days when the wolf was standing at the back door while the stork was com-

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 21.—A day of complete rest, free of politics and press conferences, gave Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, an opportunity to relax from his strenuous vacation schedule, catch up on his reading and mull over ideas for his acceptance speech.

Salt Lake City has been added to next week's vacation itinerary. Willkie will visit the Utah capital on Wednesday, attending the State's birthday celebration, following his trip to Cheyenne, Wyo., Tuesday for the annual Frontier Days Rodeo.

Representative Halleck, of Indiana, who placed Willkie in nomination at Philadelphia, is expected here tomorrow to discuss with the Republican nominee plans for the notification ceremonies at Elwood, Ind., his birthplace and boyhood home, early in August.

Plans Stop in Denver

Willkie will leave Colorado Springs by plane late tomorrow afternoon for Denver, to stay there overnight before departing early Tuesday morning on a special train chartered by the Denver Post for the Cheyenne festivities. Stops will be made at Brighton and Greeley, Colo., on the 105-mile train journey to Cheyenne and arrangements have been made for the Republican nominee to make brief platform appearances at both places.

Letters, telegrams and telephone calls, many from persons who described themselves as "life-long Democrats" continued to pour into the Willkie suite at the Broadmoor Hotel, pledging support to the Republican nominee. The volume of

Halifax to Reply To Hitler 'Peace Ultimatum' Today

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 21.—Great Britain's reply to Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech calling upon this country to surrender or face destruction, will be given tomorrow in a world-wide broadcast by the foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax.

It was emphasized here tonight that the broadcast will be intended less as an answer to Hitler's suggestion that this war can be ended to everyone's advantage than as a reaffirmation of the oft repeated British determination to fight on until victory is won.

The broadcast was scheduled for 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p. m., E. S. T.)

Nowhere is there any doubt that the foreign secretary's speech would slam the door to any vestige of hope for peace by compromise.

Roosevelt Goes With Bullit: To Hyde Park

Argentina Perils Solidarity Hopes As Havana Parley Opens; Hull Busy

By Edmund A. Chester
Associated Press Staff Writer

Havana, July 21.—A call on the Americas to defend "their common rights" against the European war's "march toward destruction" was issued today by Federico Laredo Bru, President of Cuba, as representatives of the American republics began none too hopefully to try to bind them together for continental solidarity.

Before the Cuban President formally opened the conference of foreign ministers, United States Secretary of State Hull conferred individually with the heads of dozens of delegations, doing spadework which some observers believed would indicate the direction of the week's conferences and business sessions.

Indicating the tendency of Argentina to pursue a more independent course than the other American nations was the report from Buenos Aires that Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo had reiterated Argentina's opposition to establishment of Pan American mandates over Western Hemisphere possessions of European nations.

Notes Kept Secret

The statement, which was disclosed by sources close to the foreign office, was made in reply to a United States query. The ministry declined to make public the exchange of notes until Argentina's position is announced at the conference.

After dwelling at length on the American nations' common heritage of peace and democracy, Laredo Bru warned that "the Western hemisphere is entering a new life of alarm and menace."

Since last October, he said, humanity has gone on a march "gradually becoming dizzy and senseless . . . toward destruction of that which constituted the highest aims of civilized man."

"It seems," he declared, "as if Divine predestination forces us, Americans, direct heirs of Western culture, to be indefinitely custodians of an international morale which becomes dim and deteriorates with the ruin of great peoples and with the dramatic, contemptuous silencing of the highest virtues of which mankind yesterday was proud.

"Trustee" of Civilization

"And assumption of this sacred mission of setting up the American continent as trustee for the remainder of betrayed civilization, of a civilization pushed to the edge of a precipice, is the objective which reunites you today so you may defend . . . it from implacable persecution which might go as far as to pursue it to the remotest corners of the New World.

"The dangers, you know well, excellencies, increase day by day; our America will be lucky if, due to its location, it can continue to avoid profound reactions to the distressing events we are living through. This is an epoch in which force and historical facts are closely related to scientific improvements of instruments which were created for friendlier, more effective intercourse, and which have been turned by a fiendish fate into a tragic admonition for our countries. . . .

No Right For Weak

"Conflict respects no right when weakly upheld.

Man Sails Again, So Railroad Moves Tracks 2d Time

Peekskill, N. Y., July 21.—Ray Douglas, New York City building superintendent, who forced the New York Central Railroad last Sunday to take up 240 feet of main line track so that he could sail his wife's boat under a long unused drawbridge, had sailed again today, and the railroad had to repeat its track-lifting operation.

The unused drawbridge allows only 8 feet of clearance and the Douglas boat needs 9 feet to sail between the Hudson River and her berth in Annsville Creek, during which she must pass through the drawbridge.

Newsreel cameramen turned out today to watch Douglas, his wife and two daughters take their sail. A section gang of 15 men took up the tracks on the drawbridge at 11:40 a. m. to let the 22-foot boat into the Hudson.

Rumanians Seeking Advice From Axis On Kremlin Request For New Government

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, July 21.—The Rumanian government has received a Russian note stressing the desirability of a "popular government" in Bucharest, and as a result King Carol is seeking the advice of Germany and Italy, authoritative sources said tonight.

So-called "people's" governments were established with Soviet consultation in Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania recently after Russian troops had occupied those countries. The three parliaments of these Baltic countries today voted to seek entrance into the Soviet Union.

Authoritative Rumanian sources said King Carol's Nazi-minded government received a note from Moscow Saturday conveying the Russian desire for better relations, particularly because it was believed, the note said, a "popular" government could be established.

Moscow Radio Changes Tone

Rumanian newspapers today headlined reports that the Moscow radio, after weeks of attacks against Rumania, had suddenly changed its tone and now is supporting her in the territorial dispute with Hungary over Transylvania.

Confronted with these apparent overtures, Girgu Mihail Manoilescu, Rumanian foreign minister, was reported today conferring with the German and Italian ministers at a summer resort near the black sea port of Constanta.

It was reported that shortly after the Soviet note was received, King Carol summoned Vice Premier Gen. Mihail Ionescu, War Minister Gen. Constantine Nicolescu and Chief of Staff Florea Tyenescu, presumably to confer on the newly established Rumanian defense system along the border of the former Rumanian province of Bessarabia which Russia occupied June 28.

Neutral observers believed that as a result of the Russian overtures, the question of the extent to which Rumania can rely upon Axis support may now come into sharp focus.

Bulgaria Avoids Force

Tarnono, Bulgaria, July 21 (AP).—Premier Bogdan Philoff said today that Bulgaria would not resort to arms to take Dobrudja from Rumania, or win her other territorial claims.

"The oppressive conditions of the unjust Neuilly Treaty," the Premier predicted, "are going to be abolished."

(Under the treaty after the World War boundaries were changed and Bulgaria lost 300,000 of its population.)

Truce Move Seen After Pope Talks With Duce's Envoy

Vatican City, July 21 (INS).—Pope Pius XII today conferred lengthily with Bernardo Attolico, Italian Ambassador to the Holy See, in a private audience that gave rise to speculation that the pontiff may seek to bring about a truce between the Italo-German Axis and Britain.

No official or authoritative indication was given regarding the topics discussed by His Holiness with Premier Mussolini's envoy.

Six Britons Fight Off 80 Nazi Raiders

75-Minute Air Battle Over Channel Halts Attack on Convoy

By the Associated Press

London, July 21.—Six British Hurricane fighters, lurking in the cloud banks above the English Channel, swooped upon a fleet of 80 German planes this afternoon, shooting down at least one of the enemy and drilling holes in many of the others, British authorities announced tonight.

This claimed victory—at 13 to 1 odds—was the high spot of the fighting in day-long German aerial blows at England.

The squadron leader of the six British planes reported he and his men battled for more than an hour and a quarter against the 40 Dornier 17s and 40 Messerschmitt fighters, bringing down one of the Messerschmitts.

Sun Blinds Germans

He said the British sighted the big German bomber fleet circling over a merchant ship convoy in squadrons of ten.

"They stepped right into the sun," said the British leader.

And with the sun in the German's eyes, three of the Hurricanes sped to the attack, striking the bombers just as they were loosing their "eggs" on the ships below.

Up above, the 40 German fighters, each guarding one of the bombers below, plunged screaming upon the three British planes which looked like such easy prey.

The other three Hurricanes struck at these fighters.

Then, for 75 minutes, the 6 and

Baltic States Line Up

By the Associated Press

Riga, Latvia, July 21.—Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania joined the ranks of swallowed-up small European nations today by becoming a part of Russia in all but name.

Already Communist and completely under Moscow's sway, the parliaments of the three small Baltic States voted to petition the Soviet Union for membership.

Their action, final except for the formality of acceptance by Russia, was taken amid an air of festivity and in the presence of Russian functionaries at the three respective capitals, Tallinn, Riga and Kaunas.

Communists Unopposed

Their conversion into Soviet republics and incorporation in the Soviet Union had been foreshadowed by elections in all three countries last week-end in which Communist candidates for Parliament were unopposed.

Completely formal union with the Soviet depended on acceptance by the Soviet council, which was expected to call a special session in Moscow upon arrival there of delegations from the Baltic governments.

The three parliaments met simultaneously in halls plastered with portraits of Josef Stalin and draped in red flags. They followed identical procedure.

Latvians Choose Farmer

Beginning at noon, lengthy speeches began in each Parliament bemoaning workers' unemployment and farmers' hard times under previous governments and at 3 p. m. tremendous shouts responded to petitions for union with Russia.

The Latvian Parliament chose a Communist farmer, David Kruze, as chairman, and with shouts for Stalin elected an advisory commissariat of eight.

Latvian Premier Kirchenstein outlined the measures of the past month, including amnesty for political prisoners and 15 to 20 per cen wage increases ordered for workers.

Corruption Charged

Communist Party Secretary Spure then proposed union with Russia, charging the old government with corruption and with making Latvia "one great prison."

He shouted, "Does anyone want this back?" and the deputies who had been elected without opposition cried "no! no!"

They then formally voted for Sovietization and adjourned with

Italian Survivors of Battle Drift 13 Days in Open Boat

By the Associated Press

Rome (Monday), July 22.—Six survivors from the Italian destroyer Espero have been rescued by an Italian submarine after 13 days of horror in an open boat, which upset at least three times, spilling 30 men into the shark-infested Mediterranean, the news agency Stefani reported today.

In their storm-tossed odyssey the men dined on bits of raw fish and a lone sea gull, which they cooked in a helmet over a fire kindled from an oar, the agency reported.

(The British announced the Espero's destruction at the outset of the battle of the Mediterranean July 8.)

Stefani published a diary kept by one of the rescued men, a gunner.

"The British forces were overwhelming," it said, "but we continued the battle until the last minute. There were many killed and wounded. The commander ordered lifeboats lowered, but refused to leave the Espero. I reached the last lifeboat, already overcrowded.

"Morning shows 36 men half on board and half holding onto the boat. It is necessary for the unwounded to take turns staying in the water while the others rest aboard.

"The lifeboat has overturned three times as the turns changed. Each time some wounded have disappeared. Other wounded who died were thrown overboard.

Hizzoner Lets His Hair Down

Mayor Kelly Explains Chicago Rackets—'Just Human Nature'

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Chicago, July 21.—Meet Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, the man they call the "king maker" around this windy city of Chicago, and who today moved onto the national political scene because he had about as much to do with the nomination of President Roosevelt for a third term as the "inner circle" New Dealers in Washington.

This 6-foot, 2-inch, 202-pound rangy-framed powerhouse of 64 years—who looks 10 years younger—with his curly, only slightly graying, red hair, freckled face and vitality, is the "boss," with his aging political pal, Pat Nash, of 3,500,000 folk hereabouts.

Painted in word and story as the iron-handed master of a sinister political machine, Kelly aroused the curiosity of this writer, and in a three-hour exclusive interview, he took down his hair, so to speak.

Kelly said he and Mrs. Kelly were guests at the White House three years ago and that at that time he told Mr. Roosevelt: "You are the only man to keep in the White House to keep the country safe."

He said that when President Roosevelt made his historic "quarantine the aggressor" speech here in 1937 in dedicating a bridge, he insisted that Mr. Roosevelt let himself become a candidate.

"Mr. Roosevelt said that he in-

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING
(On a Pullman, limping homeward from the convention.)

Sensitive Democrats still blush a little when they remember the six-for-a-quarter boos from the galleries on the left . . . Whenever a damper had to be put on a demonstration, Senator Barkley always had (quite unintentionally, of course) an injury or a death to announce and a doctor to summon.)

Harlan Miller

Many delegates are now opposed to ever holding a Democratic convention again in any city with a wildly friendly, if slightly disreputable and odoriferous, claque or a wildly unfriendly morning paper. . . .

* * * *

Even H. L. Mencken, the accomplished ironist and habitual thrower of cold water and dead cats, got genuinely excited on the final evening . . . Chip Robert put his stamp approval on the yellow necktie worn with the blue shirt, a Broadway ensemble.

* * * *

When the convention went slightly haywire the strongest leaders were as futile, pathetic and helpless as a gosling in a tornado. . . . Most spontaneous ovations went to Mrs. Roosevelt, Jim Farley and Paul McNutt . . . Watch Paul for 1944, when the veterans will speak up.

"—Tydings stood, Welles marched"

Most comical contrast: Senator Tydings clutching one Maryland banner in a semiheroic posture, to keep it out of the parade, while Sumner Welles, of the State Department, with grim dignity, carried the other one for Roosevelt.

Another slight suspicion of skulduggery was aroused when the band and organist played loud and peppy for Bankhead, softly and sluggishly for Wallace. . . . Maybe a psychologist could explain Paul McNutt's six repetitions of the phrase, "In the first place——" when he mounted the rostrum, while his ovation mounted.

McNutt's ovation seemed partly to be a tribute to a man who had been shabbily treated—and who is after all a swell poker player . . . As an amateur politician, Harry Hopkins' best gesture was when he sent ten tickets for the convention to the switchboard operators at his hotel . . . Farley is probably the first P. M. G. or national chairman who ever got a gold watch from frugal journalists, they like him that much.

When the convention was at its most unruly and turbulent phase, Mrs. Roosevelt took the heat for the family, and her gentle spirit helped allay the storm . . . If the President's speech had come over at 9:30, as scheduled, instead of at 12:20, it might not have gone over so well.

"—the biggest donkey of all"

Of all Chicago's art objects, the one that attracted the most attention was the pottery donkey and cart filled with flowers, as big as a go-cart, in a Michigan boulevard window . . . Several who wanted to present it to F. D. R. for his donkey collection discovered it cost $100.

Not only the apathy, but also the renunciation was so thick you could cut it with a knife, as great American after great American withdrew with reluctant feet . . . Alabama won the oratorical honors with the three samples of juicy Dixie forensics by Senator Hill and the Bankhead brothers.

Whenever anyone was introduced as a "young Democrat" you could count on a man popping up at the mike who was both bald and with a fringe of gray hair . . . Most grandiloquent phrase of the powwow, by Senator Neely in describing Senator Barkley's words: "Like apples of gold in a pitcher of silver." . . . Most convention oratory is like dumplings on a paper plate.

Lewis Again Asks For U. S. Blacklist

Would Bar Firms Failing to Comply With NLRB Rules

By the Associated Press

John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, began a new drive yesterday for Federal "blacklisting" of firms failing to comply with rulings of the National Labor Relations Board.

In a letter to members of the C. I. O. executive board, Lewis reported that he had turned over to Sidney Hillman, labor member of the National Defense Commission, a proposed executive order which would:

Require that contractors with the Government agree to "comply with all orders directed to them by the National Labor Relations Board."

Permit the National Defense Commission to terminate a contract in event of failure to comply with a Labor Board order.

Lewis' letter, urging C. I. O. organizations to "give precise and definite support to this policy," declared:

"Under the urge of a declared emergency, the Government is making patriotism profitable for American finance and industry. Surely it is not too much to expect of Government that it will also protecct the inherent and statutory rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively."

In releasing his letter to the press, Lewis also made public correspondence with President Roosevelt which disclosed that the Chief Executive rejected on March 20, 1930, a request from Lewis that he, by Executive order, require compliance with the Labor Act as a prerequisite to bidding on Government contracts.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote that he thought the "only unquestionably valid" method of instituting this requirement was by legislation.

Eight months earlier, Lewis had lost a legislative battle to have this idea incorporated in statute. Legislation to this end was approved by the Senate, but was bottled up in the House Rules Committee.

Lewis went to the Capitol to press a demand for a vote, but Speaker Bankhead and other leaders flatly refused his request. Hillman accompanied Lewis on that occasion.

The War and Navy departments have opposed Lewis' past proposals along this line on the grounds that they would hamper defense contracts. Legislative opponents argued that it was possible that a firm would be denied a contract because of a labor board order which the courts might subsequently set aside.

Stimson Names 3 Aides

Copyright by New York Times

Three civilian aides to assist the War Department in construction of barracks, mess halls and other buildings under the Army expansion program, were named yesterday by Secretary Stimson.

The aides, to be members of what is eventually to be a five-man construction advisory section in the office of the Quartermaster General, will devote themselves chiefly to recommending the three construction firms best able to carry out each specific project in order that contracts can be negotiated on a "cost plus" basis, Secretary Stimson explained.

This is only the first of a number of civilian boards which will be named in the near future to assist the War Department, officials said.

When a contractor for a particular project has been selected, the terms reached must receive the prior approval of the Assistant Secretary of War and, likewise, receive a clearance from the advisory committee to the National Defense Council before a formal contract is executed. The Quartermaster General is charged with all preliminary negotiations.

The three named today were:

Francis Blossom, New York.

Forrest S. Harvey, Pasadena, Calif.

F. J. C. Dresser, Cleveland, Ohio.

Harvey Ex-Army Man

Prior to the World War, Harvey was with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company handling for that company construction of bridges, terminals and conduit work. In the World War he was a major in the construction division of the Army, in charge of the extensive work undertaken at that time in the Panama Canal Zone. After the war, he returned to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad as assistant to the corporate chief engineer.

Dresser is director of the American Construction Council, New York City; a member of the National Association of Housing Officials, a former member of the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards, and has been associated recently with the Public Works Administration as a consultant.

Burdick Back After Counting 82,500 Reindeer in Alaska

He Ignored Weatherman's Advice And Risked His Life, but Set A Government Record, Nevertheless

By Edward Ryan

Charles Burdick, a mixture of cowboy, arctic explorer and mild prankster, can count reindeer faster than anybody else in the Government service, but he couldn't sell life insurance to a dying man.

This assortment of qualifications has made him a current celebrity in the Interior Department, along with the fact that he has just come back from running the biggest roundup of Alaskan reindeer ever attempted.

He did the job by upsetting most of the rules of personal security, and all the advice of the weatherman. He picked the coldest days of Alaska's winter to count reindeer in the Arctic field, the hottest weeks of Washington's summer to finish the desk work involved in the job.

It "Wasn't Dangerous"

The job, he said, "wasn't dangerous."

This was the assignment—to count and purchase all the reindeer in Alaska not owned by natives, running loose in an area the size of Texas. The job, assigned to the Interior Department by Congress, had to be done in a hurry.

To get it done in time, Burdick made his office in the cabin of a tri-motored plane and ran the job from the air, while herdsmen and dog sled crews did the groundwork.

Before he started, Burdick recalled, he tried to arrange for more insurance. Whatever his ideas were about the danger, his insurance agent advised that the risks put Burdick in the same class with ocean liners—he'd have to get insurance from Lloyds.

Burdick bet $45 against $10,000 that he wouldn't come through, and out of the insurance policy he scored his only failure.

His Closest Call

Burdick and two aides were flying from the Yukon to Norton Sound, at 10,000 feet over 6,000-foot mountain peaks. The plane was caught in a downdraft. It started to drop fast. Burdick, with one eye on the altimeter and the other on a bit of cash profit, offered to sell each of his companions a third interest in the $10,000 insurance policy if they would pay the whole premium.

They thought it no time for joking and refused. A moment later the plane, already below the tops of the peaks, escaped from the downdraft, and climbed back to safety. Burdick abandoned hope of a sale and took a nap.

Only other dangerous moment in 30,000 miles of flying, Burdick said, came during a takeoff at Buckland, 300 miles north of Nome, on a morning when the thermometer had dropped to 52 below. The plane dropped its landing skis and skidded to a stop on its side. The flyers were unhurt but the plane battered up, with $600 worth of damage. They called another plane and were on the job again next morning.

Burdick is a tall, weather-beaten man with bright blue eyes and a quiet way of talking. He used to be a cattle rancher in Montana. He went up to Alaska 15 years ago as a Forest Service employe and continued as such until the Interior Department borrowed him last October for the reindeer counting job.

The job, Interior officials said, had been in the making for a generation. Between 1892 and 1902 the Government imported 1,280 reindeer from Siberia to bolster native food supplies. Now the reindeer industry is the basic source of food, clothing and support for a large percentage of the 18,000 natives in the coastal region between Demarkation Point, on the Arctic Ocean, and Bristol Bay, in southern Alaska.

Starting in 1914, white owners began buying up reindeer. Between them and the natives, officials said, there grew up a steady conflict which resembled the cattle-sheep warfare of the western American grazing ranges.

About 82,500 Counted

Congress authorized purchase of nonnative-owned reindeer inn 1937 and a special committee surveyed the reindeer problem in 1938. Funds for the purchase program were appropriated last August, and of the $785,000 authorized, officials said $274,000 will be turned back to the Treasury.

The reindeer counted and bought totaled about 82,000. Burdick and his aides covered some 50 roundups, staged by herdsmen, while two-man scouting teams covered the back country by dog team to bring in stray deer. Following the reindeer census, settlements were made with the owners.

Now the reindeer are to be transferred to Eskimo ownership and developed under direction of the Alaska Reindeer Service.

Milk Company Gets $10,000 Strike Damage

New York, July 21 (AP).—The Sheffield Farms Milk Co. was awarded $10,000 damages from the Teamsters Union (A. F. L.) for a one-day strike of milk wagon drivers last February, in a decision by Arthur Meyer, chairman of the New York milk industry, announced today.

The company had listed damages of $18,000. Meyer suggested that his $10,000 award be voluntarily cut in half by the company to foster amicable labor relations. The Sheffield Co. and the Borden Co. distribute most of the milk consumed every day in the Metropolitan area.

Hizzoner Kelly Tells About Those Rackets

'It's Just Human Nature,' Chicago's Dictator Reveals

tended to announce that he was going to retire and he virtually did in a speech at Mount Vernon and again in a spech at a Jackson Day dinner," Kelly continued. "I told him it would be a mistake; that he should remain silent to the end.

"I told him if he announced his retirement that he would not be able to get any legislation he wanted through Congress; that this would be a disservice to the country in these times."

At this point Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, another of America's so-called political bosses, joined in and the interview shifted to problems of mayors of big cities.

"What about the rackets in Chicago, the gambling halls, betting parlors, and this graft we read about?" I asked Kelly.

"Chicago Is Growing"

"Coming from the stockyards district of Chicago, to cash boy in Marshall Fields, axe man for a civil engineering gang in the country, to sanitary engineer and chairman of the park commission before becoming mayor, I've always thought of people as being human," replied Kelly.

"I want Chicago to be known as a liberal town. Cities in the East that are governed by long-haired men and short-haired women are decaying. Chicago is growing."

[Chicago's population increased 8,118 between the 1930 and 1940 censuses, a gain of ¼ of 1 per cent. —Editor's note.]

"As to the rackets," Kelly went on, "there are rackets in all big cities; there is graft and for thousands of years the human race has been gambling and if you could come back here a thousand years from now they would be gambling. It's just human nature.

"It's making things illegal that produced graft. If you tell the saloons to close at midnight, the owner passes the copper on the beat a five and then when some racketeer finds the owner making money, he muscles in to get a whack.

"I had a bill passed by both the State Senate and House legalizing betting parlors, but Governor Horner vetoed it. I feel that it is no more illegal to place a bet on a horse in town than it is out in the enclosure at the race track."

He Does the Telling

"Well, what about this political machine of yours? I hear its airtight; that you rule with an iron hand," I interjected.

"It's like this. Now if I was head of a big corporation I would organize it in the manner I think best and I would see to it that my employes carry out my orders," Kelly emphasized.

"Well, I do have the Democrats here well organized and I have an organization, although we don't control the election machinery. Secretary (of the Interior) Ickes and his crowd does that. Well, when you get a good organization set up to run a city, they call it a political machine.

"I found out through previous experience that cities that elect mayors that are bossed by the bankers or somebody else don't have good administrations. I determined to boss and not let anybody tell me what to do, but to do the telling. That's the only way you can get things done. I'm not going to be the creature of bosses.

"When I need money for my Christmas fund for the children—I raise money every year for a complete outfit for 70,000 children to keep them warm through the winter, I go to these people and tell them to kick in for charity; then they kick in for other things."

Taken for a Ride

Kelly was asked about reports that there was graft in the city hall.

"Well, John T. Flynn and some columnists have been taking me for a ride and some of the newspapers here do," he said. "I do the best I can to keep it down.

"I manage the town as best I can," he continued. "We have too little money, but I'm bringing in stream-lined transportation, and I have built for Chicago the greatest park system of any city in the world along Lake Michigan. It cost $200,000,000 and the people like it, whether they say I'm a good mayor or not.

"I don't want this town to be cramped with blue laws. We are not bluebloods here, we are redblooded. By being liberal we curtail crime and we grow.

Communists Denied Rights, Letter Claims

Roosevelt and Jackson Asked to Act by 65 Prominent Americans

By the Associated Press

Contending that the right to petition and vote was being denied citizens by "self-styled vigilante and 'patriotic' groups," a group of 65 prominent persons have asked President Roosevelt and Attorney General Jackson to enforce laws guaranteeing these rights.

"We refer in particular," they said in an open letter yesterday, "to the attempt to prevent, by illegal and violent methods, the efforts of the largest minority party in the country, the Communist Party, to conform to the statutory requirements in the different States for placing its candidates on the ballot.

"It is as citizens who are not members of the party and who do not subscribe to its principles, program or policy that we state our belief . . . in the constitutionally guaranteed right of minority parties, however unpopular, to be heard by the voters and to be judged by them in the manner prescribed by law."

"Typical Instances" Cited

The letter was made public by the National Emergency Conference for Democratic Rights.

Citing "typical instances" of "arrests, intimidations and outright constitutional violations," the letter continued:

"These acts threaten to destroy the the name, America, and to imperil very liberty that is consonant with our national security by sowing hysteria, prejudice and hate."

Signers of the letter included Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president emeritus of Mount Holyoke College; Dr. E. A. Ross, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union; Dr. Franz Boas, anthropologist; the Rev. Clarence E. Boyer, Madison Square Church House, N. Y.; Paul Robeson, Negro singer; Max Lerner, Williams College professor and former editor of the Nation; Malcolm Cowley, editor the New Republic; Rabbi Michael Alper, of New York, and Rockwell Kent, artist and author.

As "a few typical examples" of the violations described, the letter listed the following:

"In Wappinger Falls, N. Y., on June 23, eight members of the Communist party were arrested and jailed on the pretext that they were disturbing the peace by ringing doorbells to solocit signatures for electoral petitions.

125 Signers Indicted

"In West Virginia, 125 citizens have been indicted for signing similar petitions, while in Weirton, W. Va., hundreds of innocent signers of petitions are being intimidated and even assaulted by 'patriots' and denied protetcion by local authorities.

"In Rockford, Ill., collectors of signatures were attacked by organized hoodlums in the streets. It is reported that these attacks were sanctioned by the authorities.

"In Michigan, Secretary of State Kelly has publicly intimidated signers of such petitions by announcing that a card-index file of 9,965 signers will be used by him to dismiss such persons from his department.

"The county attorney of Santa Cruz County, Ariz., publicly declared that he would use any means to deprive the Communist Party of its right to appear on the ballot and has arrested a signature collector."

Spending Program Held Too Small To Be Effective

The American Council on Public Affairs, holding that a long-range spending program was essential to a "sound national economy," contended yesterday that the Roosevelt spending program had not been successful because it was begun too late and had not spent enough.

The conclusions were advanced in a survey by Arthur E. Burns and Donald S. Watson, of George Washington University. The council is a private research organization.

"In a very real sense government blundered into the policy of public spending for recovery," the survey said. "When other methods failed, deficit spending was accepted, but only as a third or fourth choice. Deficit spending was inevitable in any case. . . . Government groped about with this policy, never sure that it would work, never convinced that the policy was desirable. As a consequence, the policy of deficit spending has not been pushed vigorously enough to assure clear-cut success."

The writers contended that whatever prosperity may result from the preparedness program, depression is inevitable. "The bigger the war prosperity," they said, "the bigger the post-war depression."

mail and messages has been so great that Willkie has been able to read only a part of them, and a secretarial staff of ten persons, headed by Fred Rahter, Willkie's personal secretary is required to sort and acknowledge the more important mail.

Today's visitors included Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick, of the New York Times; Mr. and Mrs. John Cowles, of Minneapolis, and Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Cowler, of Des Moines, Iowa.

Mrs. West Backs Willkie

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—Mrs. Helen Hunt West, of Jacksonville, Fla., an active worker in the Democratic Party and publicity chief of the National Women's Party, said today she would support Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential candidate, because she could not conscientiously vote for a third term.

Emphasizing that she spoke only for herself and not for the Women's Party, she also said that the Democratic Party's failure to adopt an equal rights for women plank in its platform, as did the Republicans, was "a matter of great disappointment to millions of women throughout the country."

One of the aims of the Women's Party is to obtain a vote by the States on an equal rights amendment to the Constitution.

Roland L. Hill, who quit his job as auditor in the General Accounting Office to campaign for Willkie, said last night organization of the National Young Democrats for Willkie is under way. National headquarters, he said, have been established at 1630 R street northwest.

State directors for each State are being appointed, Hill said, and will be announced in a few days. The organization, he declared, is no aggregation of "disgruntled Democrats," but "a real Young Democratic Club."

Thief Gets Purse, Drops Another

Frightened by the screams of a young woman, a purse-snatcher early yesterday dropped one pocketbook but made off with another.

The victim was Marjorie Pea, 1709 N street northwest, who lost $5 and personal articles. She was walking with Frances Fielder, same address, on Connecticut avenue, near N street, when the thief grabbed both their purses.

Miss Fielder gave chase and recovered her own pocketbook two blocks away after bystanders had joined in the chase. The young thief proved too fast for them, however.

A pocketbook containing $17 was seized from Lillian Barnes, 3630 Warren street northwest, early yesterday, near her home. Another victim was Iona Barchus, 1208 M street northwest, whose pocketbook contained 90 cents.

Hindsight and Foresight

By HOLGAR J. JOHNSON

President, Institute of Life Insurance

AS we face troubled times and solemn decisions, it often gives us courage and strength to look back on troubled times in the past. Your old history book—the one you used in school—has been brought up to date. Have you read the new chapters that describe what happened in 1929—and afterwards?

"A terrific crash in the stock market in October ruined thousands," says Professor David S. Muzzey in his "American History." "Factories and mills were closing . . . banks were failing, prices of wheat, cotton, oil, copper were steadily falling, exports were declining and mortgages were being foreclosed all over the land."

In this crisis, the public turned to its institutions that had always stood for security. Life insurance was one of these.

Except for a short period beginning with the bank holiday, when the insurance commissioners of certain states ruled that a policyholder must show his need before he could surrender his policy for cash or borrow on it, the companies carried on as if there were no depression. At no time was there any interruption in death claim payments or in the payments on endowments or annuities.

IN the ten years that followed, annual payments ranging from two billions upward were made regularly to policyholders, widows, orphans and old people. Can you imagine what a stabilizing influence this was, when the value of most kinds of property seemed so uncertain?

But perhaps I am painting too rosy a picture. What would Dr. Muzzey say on this subject? We got in touch with him and asked him what he thought of the way the life insurance companies handled themselves during the depression.

"If you ask me," he said, "the depression proved that life insurance is the soundest business institution in the country."

Today, like yesterday, we in the insurance business stand braced to help 64 million policyholders withstand whatever economic shocks man or nature can deliver, in every way within our power.

This is what is expected of us, and this is what we expect of ourselves.

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

U. S. Army Won't Copy Nazi Tactics

'Nothing Sensational' Shown, Experts Say; To KeepOwn Methods

By Julius C. Edelstein
United Press Staff Writer

United States military plans will continue to be based on "tried and proved" tactics, and will not be altered because of German success in Europe, high Army sources said last night.

Military strategists have completed a comprehensive analysis of detailed reports of the Battle of France. They concluded that the Germans showed new techniques in modern warfare, but developed nothing sensational in the way of tactics.

War Department officials are said to have ordered the study in answer to widespread demands in both civilian and military circles that the Army throw its present organization overboard and adopt German methods.

The Nazis' mass tank attacks and use of aerial bombardment concentrations to weaken the enemy do not constitute military innovations, Army sources said, adding that this form of attack had been vastly overdramatized.

Army officials are said to have discovered nothing in the German technique that would have demoralized a properly equipped and expanded American force. It also was remarked in this connection that the Nation's defense plans have been based on the attack formula, as demonstrated by operations in the Argonne-Meuse campaign in 1918.

The Army Air Corps, it was pointed out, has been trained in the concentrated attack techniquue for several years. What the corps lacks is a sufficient number of planes and replacements to compete with the vast German armada.

The same is true of tanks, military specialists observed. Germany threw vast numbers of tanks of all sizes at the French and Belgians, but it was the traditional "break through" tactic, supported by infantry and closely-knit supply lines, whcih defeated the French.

Each German attacking force was a complete self-sufficient unit of itself, as American armies always have been. They enabled the famous Nazi "bulge" into northern France to repel Allied attempts to cut them off from the main German armies.

The two traditional tactics of attack, developed by Napoleon, are the flank mvement and the "break through." The Allied flanks were protected by the geographical elements, the sea and the Maginot line, and hence the Germans followed the usual pattern of the "break through."

Foot Soldier Still King

French defense forces, highly departmentalized, were not sufficiently flexible to swing antitank units into position against local tank attacks, and a general demoralization followed, the Army study disclosed.

The German foot infantry, by far the largest portion of the German army, was everywhere trained to follow up tank advances and occupy strategic terrain. The famous Belgian fort of Eben-Emael, fall of which led to the Allied rout in Belgium, was taken by infantry in the tie-worn pattern of mass charge and establishment of German artillery below the guns of the fort. It was finally taken in hand-to-hand fighting.

Returns to Washington From Westward Jaunt

Biddle Calls for Third Term

ing down the chimney." He asked Senator Burke if he thought there was any difference between Hoover and Willkie, and if he thought there was anyone in the Republican Party who could offer any "competition" to Roosevelt.

Points to Knox, Stimson

Burke's reply was that the President thought enough of Republican talent to select two members of the party, Stimson and Knox, to head the departments of government most immediately responsible for national defense.

One issue of the campaign, Biddle held, must necessarily be personal, since in the outcome of the war for America "so much depends on the wisdom and courage of the leadership we choose."

This era, he declared, ranks with those that produced Washington and Lincoln. He asked:

"Who in this national crisis is better qualified to lead the country—the president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, a successful business executive, or the President of the United States, recognized not only here, but in France and England and throughout the world, as a very great man?"

Willkie and SEC

Biddle contended that the Republicans, rather than openly advocate repeal of New Deal laws, preferred to attack their administration.

"We all know too well that you can kill the effectiveness of a law as well by administraton as by repeal," he said. "Can't you see the former president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation administering the Stock Exchange Act? The Republicans want to have the New Deal cake—and eat it.

"But the real issue—deep and passionate—is not whether these laws are being well administered, but whether the people want to give them up and go back to the days of big business control."

Burke described as "strong" the candidates of both parties, and during the informal debate that followed the reading of prepared speeches gave the Democrats a "clean slate" on war preparedness.

Limitation of Tenure

"The issue which will be settled this year," he held, however, "is whether there shall be any limitation on the tenure of office of President."

"Is there anyone so simple-minded as to believe that in 1944 the world will not be faced with the same or another emergency that will require that this one indispensable man shall be continued on indefinitely?" he asked.

"What has been done in the seven and a half years of the Roosevelt rule should give pause to every thinking person," Burke declared. He held that power and authority are being concentrated in Washington "in a degree that, unless checked, must soon displace a union of free and indestructible States with a unified, centralized, all-powerful National Government."

Attacks Kelly Machine

"The one who is now asking you to break this sacred (third-term) tradition is the same man who three short years ago sought . . . to destroy the independence of our courts, to violate in spirit and in fact the constitutional requirement for the separation of the powers of Government . . ."

Brooks attacked Administration managers of the Democratic Convention for accepting support of "one of the most vicious political machines in the Nation—the Kelly-Nash machine which delivered the 58 votes of Illinois to the will of one man."

The Republicans, he said, present Willkie and McNary "as the only possible protection against the encroaching military power of Europe and the encroaching political power in America."

Dirksen charged the Administration with a complete about-face on foreign policy after the Republican Convention and likened the Democratic defense program to Chicago where "you had one Vice President on hand and about 100 on order."

to take advantage of whatever breeze there might have been, were injured when the porch collapsed, spilling them and four others toward the earth.

Most seriously injured in Washington's sleeping porch mishap at 1938 Fourth street northwest was Richardson Reeves, 24, of 322 Oakdale place northwest, who was thrown clear of a lower floor porch and fell three stories to the brick court. Ligaments in his foot were torn.

He and Valencia Johnson, 19; Dorothy Johnson, 17, both of 322 Oakdale place northwest, and Leonard Diggs, of 600 U street northwest, were treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

No Relief Forecast

Except for Reeves, the eight party-makers who tumbled over one another from the third-story porch landed with only slight injuries on a second-story porch.

Still no relief from the heat was in sight last night as the Weather Bureau reported the mercury rose to 96 degrees at 4 p. m. for the highest July 21 mark since 1934, when it went to 100.

During most of the preceding night the temperature stayed above 80 degrees, reaching a low of 77 at 6 a. m. The nit began a steady rise. Reaching 90 shortly before noon, it remained above that mark until nightfall, when an already high relative humidity rose to make for another uncomfortably moist night.

Yesterday's mean temperature—86—was 9 above normal.

Congress Seen Speeding U.S. Draft System

Legislation Expected In Two Weeks; Army Prepares for 400,000

President Roosevelt's acceptance speech appears to have made it almost a certainty that the United States soon will fall into step with the rest of the world by requiring military service of selected citizens.

A few sentences of the address forecast that the full force of the Administration would be thrown behind an effort to enact promptly—possibly in the next two weeks—compulsory training legislation.

"Planes and guns and tanks are wholly insufficient unless they are implemented by the power of men trained to use them," the Chief Executive said, and added:

"Most right thinking persons are agreed that some form of selection by draft is as necessary and as fair today as it was in 1917 and 1918."

"Go-Ahead" Signal

It was taken as a final go-ahead signal by advocates of the proposal—now almost ready for action by Congress—to revive the World War selective service scheme, which the Army and Navy have indorsed.

Now, on the tentative assumption that the legislation, with amendments, will be approved by August 1, the Army is busily perfecting detailed plans to start within two months the training of an initial 400,000 men between 21 and 31 to be chosen by lot from the group which can best be spared from civilian life.

The plans contemplate that by October 1 nearly 1,000,000 men will be under arms in the land forces, including the entire National Guard, a far greater number than at any other time except when the Nation was actually at war.

Though Congress was told by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, that the training problem was "simple," it is no secret that the Army's facilities will be taxed to the utmost at the outset.

Shortage of Equipment

Rifles and other basic arms are available in ample numbers, but there is an admitted shortage in such equipment as blankets and overcoats which cannot be met for many months.

It is entirely possible that this winter thousands of recruits will have to drill in varicolored mackinaws instead of olive drab overcoats.

The blanket shortage does not mean any are likely actually to suffer from cold, but there may have to be temporary makeshift changes in regulations for blanket rolls and packs used in overnight marches.

The World War demonstrated that under pressure necessary camps and barracks can be provided on short notice. In 1917, without the detailed advance arrangements and far more adequate facilities in existence now, extra accommodations were ready for 430,000 recruits in less than four months. Ultimately there were 32 camps and cantonments aside from regular army posts.

Officers Available

Trained officers offer no immediate problem. A quarter century ago, there were only about a tenth of the 200,000 officers needed for the Army of 4,000,000 that was created; now more than 100,000 reservists, aside from some 25,000 Regular Army and National Guard officers, are available.

Of all the principal powers, only the United States and Great Britain whose fleets comprised their first lines of defense, have relied entirely on volunteers for military manpower in peacetime. Now some of the smaller nations, notably Mexico, which had followed their example, are turning, too, to universal service.

Birthday Gifts Unopened as Baby, 2, Fights for Life After Fall

Child Suffers Skull Injury in 12-Foot Fall As Parents Plan Fete

The birthday cake stood neglected. The presents—a white toy rabbit and a new blue suit—lay unopened, and the father of 2-year-old Paul Stanley Didson said slowly: "Nobody's going to open them . . . until he comes home."

On his birthday yesterday, Paul fell from a second story window at the Dodson home, 1223 Fifteenth street northwest. At the time when he would have been celebrating at at cake-laden table, Paul lay at Emergency Hospital under treatment for a possible fracture of the skull.

His condition was said to be "good," but even as she repeated the word to reassure herself, the mother, Mrs. Lula Dodson, grimly pointed out:

"Look where he landed—on the edge of that concrete and iron grating."

From a height of approximately 12 feet, the child plunged, pushing out the window screen back of him. The Dodsons moved to that address only last Monday and since then he had often perched in that window to watch the autos go past and to be entertained by the antics of a certain black cat, Impy, on the lawn.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Dodson was reading the comic section to Paul and his sister, Emmagene, 3. They weer saving the birthday celebration till afternoon, when his cousins, Elizabeth and David Dodson, were coming across town to join in the cake-cutting.

Suddenly Mrs. Dodson heard a scraping sound and looked up to see Paul toppling from his perch. Marjorie Derring, 17, who lives in another apartment at the same address, sat on a bench only a few feet from where he fell.

A passing motorist—Mrs. Dodson didn't even learn his name in all the excitement—stopped and helped pick up the child. Within a few minutes his car was hurrying Mrs. Dodson and Paul to the hospital.

"He never lost consciousness. When I walked into the emergency room, he called me to him," the father, Paul Dodson, said. He was summoned to the hosiptal from the filling station where he works at 1827 Adams Mill road.

"We won't know the results of the X-rays until tomorrow," Dodson added.

In the meantime the Dodsons were already moving yesterday to a downstairs apartment between their trips to the hosiptal. They wanted to be away from that gaping screenless window. Mixed in with the belongings to be moved were the unopened presents and the chocolate cake.

Children's Ship Eluded U-Boat

London, July 21 (U.P.).—Canadian reports to London newspapers tonight told how a liner carrying British children to Canada escaped a German submarine by following a zigzag course. Passengers arriving at an eastern Canadian port were given as the source of the reports.

(In Canada, authoritative sources believed that the reports just being circulated in London concerned a vessel which reached an eastern Canadian port from England on Friday night. Several passengers on that vessel told of escaping a U-boat, but officers of the ship refused to confirm the story.)

the pending "execess-profits-tax" measure, might seriously impede the preparedness program.

He said that many industries which were asked by the Defense Commission to expand plants were entitled to know what taxes would be faced before they made heavy capital investments.

Training Legislation

Within a week or ten days, the Senate may take up legislation for compulsory military training.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, said he hoped to get the Senate Military Affairs Committee together this week to complete redrafting of the Burke-Wadsworth bill which calls for registration of men between 18 and 65 years with training for large groups between 21 and 45.

Several Senators already have expressed opposition, and a momentous debate is expected. There also have been indications that a fight would be made against present mobilization of any part of the National Guard.

Packard Plant Guarded After Bombing Threat

Detroit, July 21 (U.P.).—Police today threw a guard around the mile-long plant of the Packard Motor Car Co. on the request of a Packard official in New York, who said he received an anonymous threat to blow up the plant, which is working on national defense orders.

C. E. Anderson, Packard service manager in New York, said he was informed by telephone that the plant would be blown up because "the company has agreed to manufacture airplane engines for Great Britain."

Packard recently was awarded a contract to manufacture 6,000 Rolls Royce airplane engines for Great Britain and 3,000 for the United States. Police said a search of the plant late today revealed "nothing out of the ordinary." No arrests have been made, they said.

Civil War Veteran, 94, Finally Joins G. A. R.

Philadelphia, July 20 (A.P.).—William Ritter, 94, who declined to join the Grand Army of the Republic because he was "fed up with everything military" at the conclusion of the Civil War in 1865, joined the dwindling ranks of the "boys in blue" here today.

The oath was administered by Moses I. French, 98, last surviving member of Ellis Post No. 6, Ritter, a veteran of the 198th Pennsylvania Regiment, changed his mind about joining the G. A. R. after witnessing a Memorial Day parade.

Maryland Baby Slain, His Mother Accuses Father

Nineteen-months-old James Barcus, jr., colored, was dead of a fractured skull last night, and Montgomery County police were searching for his 22-year-old father, charged with his murder.

Barcus was accused by his common-law wife, Millie Frazier, 18, colored, of bashing the baby's head on the ground when she refused to return to his home in Durwood, Md., with the child.

The tragedy occurred in the front yard of the home of Jane Sewell, 21, colored, in a wooded section outside Lincoln Park, Md., where Millie Frazier had been staying with her son.

Both women told police Barcus had come to the house and pleaded with the mother to return to his home with the child. When she refused, they argued over custody of the baby, police were told. Then Barcus seized the baby and ran into the yard.

Why Washington is first to see this new kind of motion picture

Tomorrow night, "THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH"—a saga of modern America—is being presented to Washington for its premiere performance.

This is because of the national significance of much that this new picture reveals, and the imminence of dangers for which it supplies enlightening background.

It is a picture such as you have never seen before—an absorbing record of the fateful years that began in 1914—a gripping story of the great figures on the world stage, and of ordinary American people like yourself and all of us.

To see "THE RAMPARTS WE WATCH" is to store up a memorable and inspiring motion-picture experience!

Zero Hour Near, Britain Warned

Berlin Claims Heavy Damage in Raids On Channel Convoys

By International News Service

Berlin, July 21.—Heavy damage to a British cruiser and two destroyers with direct hits scored by German warplanes was claimed in Berlin tonight, while Nazi circles warned that Britain's "period of grace" would soon expire.

The damaging blows to the British warships were declared in today's German high command communique to have been dealt during Nazi air attacks on ship convoys in the English Channel.

Describing widespread German raids over Britain and mentioning British counter-raids over Reich territory, the communique claimed 22 British planes were shot down Saturday, as against the loss of only 5 German aircraft.

Light bombing units of Adolf Hitler's vast air force unloaded explosive destruction on airports, docks, oil and munitions depots in southern and middle England, as well as on industrial plants near Newcastle, the rich English coal district, in 24 hours of incessant attacks beginning Saturday morning, the high command said. The communique related:

"Bomb hits caused fires and explosions."

The British cruiser and two destroyers were stated to have been "hit and heavily damaged" in the raids on the Channel convoys.

In air fighting precipitated by these attacks, German pursuit planes were said to have shot down eight British combat craft over the Channel. One British plane that ventured as far as the German-held Dutch port of Rotterdam was said also to have been downed.

During the night British bombers dropped explosives on areas of northern and western Germany and Holland, "causing slight material damage," the communique said.

It charged that seven civilians were killed when several British bombs fell in a small town of northern Germany.

Nine of the British planes participating in these raids were said to have been shot down, seven of them by antiaircraft guns and two by German fighters.

Ready for Blitzkreig

The British also attempted an air attack on Germany's big naval base of Wilhelmshaven, but were driven into retreat by naval antiaircraft batteries which shot down four raiders, according to the communique..

German quarters, meanwhile, reiterated that Britain will not have much more time in which to give "British people's reaction" to Chancellor Hitler's "last-chance" peace offer made in his Reichstag speech of Friday. They emphasized that all is ready for a blitzkrieg invasion of Britain which awaits only the "pressing of the button" by the Fuehrer, once he is convinced that the British definitely will not or cannot respond to his "appeal to reason."

Replying to a message from Premier Mussolini feliciating him upon his Reichstag pronouncement, Hitler telegraphed the Italian Duce:

"The united strength of Italy and Germany will victoriously gain the freedom of our peoples."

Riga Officials Arrested

Berlin, July 21 (U.P.).—Coincident with Latvia's proclamation of incorporation into the Soviet Union, German dispatches from Moscow today reported the arrest in Riga of several former government ministers, high state officials, bank directors and industrialists.

Indictments have been made out against those arrested, charging them with embezzlement, bribery and sabotage, it was said.

Russo-Turk Negotiations

Berlin, July 21 (AP) (Via Radio). The German radio, quoting Russian sources in Turkey, said tonight negotiations would be started shortly between Turkey and Russia to extend their trade treaty.

Hope Abandoned For Lost Child

Beachwood, N. J., July 21 (INS).—Stymied in their search for Craig Bender, 3, missing since Thursday, authorities tonight virtually abandoned hope of finding the youngster alive.

With two naval blimps, six planes and more than 500 fishermen, CCC workers, summer vacationists and Marines pressed into service, not a single clew to the child's whereabouts has been found. The youngster was last seen about 7 p. m. Thursday, when he told a neighbor he was "going home."

Italy to Export Only at Profit

Rome (Monday), July 22 (AP).—A government decree, made public today, prohibits all exports from Italy except those deemed profitable to the national economy.

Effective as of last Saturday, the decree authorizes customs offices to permit exports of certain unspecified goods which are held to be nationally profitable.

Others may be exported only with ministerial permission. The decree gave its aims as regulation of currency control and assurance of internal provisions.

Reporters Besiege Hull at Havana

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PRESS CONFERENCE—Secretary of State Hull (left) is interviewed by reporters on his arrival at Havana for the Inter-American Conference. shouts of "Soviet Latvia forever," and "long live Stalin."

The procedure and the scene were almost identical in Kaunas and Tallinn, capitals of Lithuania and Estonia.

Actual Soviet control already is accomplished with the Red army guarding Estonian, Latvian and Lithuanian frontiers. Soviet-sponsored governments already are in power.

Absorption of the three countries into the Soviet Union will eliminate them as buffer states along the German-Russian frontier created by the partition of Poland.

Union will provide new military bases giving Russia strategical power on the Baltic.

Communist and labor delegations came from Russia by the dozens for the gala assemblies of the three states, begun as republics, but under rule of Fascist pattern for the past seven years.

The Latvian parliament met in Riga's independence of Russia under the leadership of Karl Ulmanis, former president but now ousted by the new regime.

Newspapers declared "the working people" wanted union, returning the countries' 5,500,000 population to Russia from which they won independence only 22 year sago.

(The combined population of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia is about 5,500,000. Lithuania has 2,500,000; Latvia, 1,900,000, and Estonia, 1,100,000.

(Together they cover 65,243 square miles, spread on the east coast of the Baltic Sea.

(Southernmost is Lithuania, 21,488 square miles, bordering German East Prussia. Sandwiched between is Latvia, the largest, with 25,402 square miles. On the north is the smallest, Estonia, 18,353 square miles, with its coast across the gulf of Finland from Helsinki and the water approach to Leningrad.

(Since the partition of Poland, all have common borders with Soviet Russia, occupying a coastal tier between Soviet territory and the sea.)

Streets and homes of every city and village were decorated with flowers and red flags flying everywhere, sometimes beside the national flags of each country.

Squares in the capitals were cleared for a grand celebration tonight with dances by Red army troopers, music by Red army bands and singing by Red army choirs.

Government decrees, meanwhile, carried on a practical program of Sovietization with investigations already under way on how former officials acquired their wealth. The investigators are privileged to delve back into transactions completed a decade ago.

In Latvia, land speculation was prohibited by the ministry of justice, which reserved the right to forbid transfers of land or property. Such land transactions as those by Germans returning to their homeland after the Russian-German Treaty were ordered annuled.

Another decree named the chiefs of commerce, industry, trade, credits and transport as responsible for provision of raw materials and continued industrial production. Agriculture has been the principal occupation with only industries intended primarily to meet home demand, for instance, clothing.

Business undertaking and individuals, the ministry of finance declared, henceforth must deposit cash resources in banks, retaining each day enough reserve for the next day's paymenis.

Six Britons Rout 80 Nazi Air Raiders

the 80 did battle that ended when the Germans sped for home, the British leader related.

There were no British losses, and the merchant ships below escaped damage, British officials said.

Elsewhere in the air war, results for Britain were not reported so decisive. German planes scattered destruction on widely separated districts of England, following up British raids on Germany and German-held territory.

The loss of life was not announced, but six persons were known to have been killed in one place and nine in another. Numerous persons were injured as the bombs, some of the screaming variety, fell on homes and shops and in one instance on a hotel.

Three German planes were shot down during the day, the air ministry said, bringing to 24 the number of Nazi bombers and fighters brought down i nthe last 48 hours.

The air ministry, announcing the raids on German territory, acknowledged that five bombers were lost in last night's attacks on the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven and on Hamburg, Bremen, the harbor of Emden, the Ruhr and on Holland and Belgium.

British planes, the air ministry said, were believed to have badly damaged a supply ship at sea and to have started several fires on the Bremen docks.

In daylight operations yesterday, including an attack on the wireless station on Utshire Island, near Stavanger, Norway, and the airdrome at Flushing, Holland, two British reconnaissance planes failed to return and four fighters were lost.

Minesweeper Sunk

The air ministry said the Saturday night bombers met violent opposition, but nevertheless penetrated to their objectives and bombed the Wilhelmshaven dockyard as well as oil refineries at Hamburg and Bremen, and aircraft factories, air dromes and oil depots in the Ruhr, Holland and Belgium.

The admiralty announced the sinking of the minsweeping trawler Crestflower in a battle with German aircraft and the loss of two seamen.

The air ministry's bulletin, describing the R. A. F. bombing of the German oil tanks at Vlaardingen, near Rotterdam, said yellow smoke rose 1,000 feet from the burning tanks.

Direct hits were registered by the leader of the British squadron and caused explosions and fires immediately. Fortunately for the British, the smoke screened them effectively from German antiaircraft fire, the ministry said.

"The sky was still red with the reflection of the fires when we looked back 100 miles away on our return journey," the air ministry said the squadron leader reported.

Raids Begin Early

The Nazi raids on England started early today, the planes roaring out of the east while many persons were still abed.

They came singly and in small groups to northeast England, to the northwest and the southwest and even penetrated wild Wales.

Some deaths were reported, but property damage on the whole was termed slight.

A hotel in a northeastern town was hit. Several persons were knocked out of bed, but none was killed. One man was blown through a door and buried in rubble, but suffered only bruises. Others also were buried in debris.

In the northwest, bombs were dropped on a working-class area, killing some and injuring others and wrecking a number of houses.

In the attack on Wales, witnesses said, the Germans released whistling bombs—their "terror" weapon.

Chaser planes and antiaircraft fire attacked the raiders.

Three of the screaming bombs also fell on a town in southwest England, demolishing some houses and shops and killing two person. Six other were injured. An aged couple, awakened by the shriek of the bomb, scrambled under the bed. The explosion blew the wall of the house in, but they were uninjured.

Several adults were killed in raids on the northwest. A bomb fell within 5 feet of the door of an air raid warden's home. Part of the front wall of the house was blown in, but the ten occupants of the building escaped unhurt.

The raids, like others carried out daily in the past month, were regarded as routine and a foretaste of what will come should Germany use the full force of her air power.

About 3,000 children, roughly half of the child population, was removed from Eastbourne, on the English Channel, today to safer parts of England. Parents were instructed to bid their young ones goodby at home and to keep away from the station, where the children were loaded into five special trains.

Japanese Seek Australian Accord

Sydney, Australia, July 21 (AP).—Japan's new premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, has sent a message to the Australian people inviting them to cooperate with Japan in a cultural mission for promotion of good will.

"With the world divided in two opposite camps, international cultural understanding is the way to lasting peace and common prosperity," his message said. "Australia and Japan, two vital dynamic countries in the Pacific, could do much to foster these causes," he said.

Gayda Asks Better U. S. Understanding

Appeal Against Moves That Might Prevent Peace Is Seen

By the United Press

Rome, July 21.—Virginia Gayda, Italy's leading political commentator, in a front-page editorial in the Voce d'Italia today appealed to President Roosevelt and the American people for a better understanding of the problems and aspirations of 130,000,000 Italians and Germans.

Gayda's appeal was interpreted in many quarters as being a suggestion also that Roosevelt not ruffle international waters while the slightest possibility remains of Britain concluding peace with the Axis powers. These quarters believe that Gayda indirectly asked Roosevelt not to give Britain false hopes of United States intervention, which might prevent Britain from considering peace terms.

Gayda said that Roosevelt's hatred of Italy and Germany was blinding him to European realities. He asked why such a champion of the rights of other peoples would not pay more attention to the needs of the Italian and German peoples.

New Raid on Malta

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 21.—Italian bombers were credited today with hard, new blows at the British stronghold on Malta and far-flung attacks on British outposts in Africa.

A high command communique said all raiding planes returned safely from low-flying night attacks on a torpedo factory on Malta, and only one plane was lost in raids on air bases at Buna, Kenya Colony, air and naval bases at Berbera, British Somaliland, and at Kurmuk, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

One British plane was reported shot down in north Africa and its crew of three captured.

Transport Hits Claimed

(British sources said fast, torpedo-carrying swordfish planes of the fleet scored numerous direct hits on Italian transports, supply ships and an oil tanker in a dawn attack Saturday on Tobruk, port of Italian Libya.

(The attacking planes, veritable arsenals equipped with Vickers guns firing through the propeller, a Lewis gun and carrying alternate loads of bombs and 18-inch torpedoes, were said to have emerged unscathed from the wholesale assault. The admiralty said a tremendous explosion followed a direct hit on the oil tanker.

(In north African land and air operations, the British reported continued harassing of Italian columns trying without success to smash through to an isolated Italian garrison besieged for 12 days at Fort Capuzzo, Libya.

(British communiques said a pony patrol of the Camel Corps inflicted casualties in a surprise attack on an outpost at Farenji, Italian Somaliland, July 19, and told of a skirmish between a British patrol and an Italian mounted battalion along the Kenya frontier.)

14 remain. Two other lifeboats have come near, almost in the same condition. All are asking water but none is to be had. Sharks are all around the boats, trying to overturn them.

"Next morning: No trace of other boats. Rowing with one oar we are trying to reach the distant shore but wind is against us.

"Sixth day: Found an empty boat, evidently a lifeboat from a steamer, with 14 oars, four kegs of water, a compass, candles, signaling lamp, mackintoshes, rocket pistol and 30 rocket matches, etc.

"Now only seven of us are left.

"Twice airplanes have come near, received our distress signal and disappeared.

"Thirteenth day: High seas and a strong wind and the crew almost exhausted when a submarine came near and rescued the six survivors. In 13 days our only food was one gull killed with the rocket pistol and cooked in a helmet over a fire made of one oar, and one fish, eaten row."

Havana Parley Hears Bru Plea

common rights. This policy is the only one capable of maintaining America in a pacific way of life and of guaranteeing her permanent enjoyment of happiness."

Today's program was devoted to Laredo Bru's speech and the usual opening formalities.

A few minutes before the meeting opened, Secretary of State Cordell Hull entered the chamber. The delegates and galleries gave him an ovation. The tall, gray-haired statesman smilingly acknowledged the applause. Mrs. Hull, attired in dark blue with a white sat, sat in an upper box.

The first private plenary session will be held tomorrow morning for organization and in the afternoon Miguel Campa, Cuban secretary of state, will make the opening speech.

Highlights of tomorrow's schedule, however, is a speech by Hull and already the delegates are speculating on what he will say.

As representative of the most powerful American nation, his words will have great influence on the delegates who heard the stocky, square-jawed Cuban President's warning this afternoon in Havana's beautiful $18,000,000 capitol, guarded by the bayonets of troops alert for possible violence.

Even prominent Cuban newspapermen were searched thoroughly by military and federal police strung around the great marble palace.

The air of uncertainty hanging over the proceedings was clouded further by the failure of the Argentine delegation to appear for preconvention conversations.

In the face of Argentina's insistence that she would do nothing to hurt her prewar relations with European powers, many delegates saw little hope of pushing through a concrete defense program, a project for establishment of Pan American mandates over European possessions on this continent or even a strong statement supporting the "America for Americans" doctrine.

Promises on Martinique

Havana, July 21.—Both French and German diplomats are assuring the Pan American foreign ministers here that there will be no attempt to change the political sovereignty of Martinique or other French possessions in the Western Hemisphere as it becomes apparent that a possible Pan-American mandate over all American dependencies of nations conquered by Germany will be the liveliest and most controversial topic on the agenda.

Secretary of State Hull's preliminary talks with delegates in advance of today's opening formal session have convinced him there is a general willingness to take some action in the next few days recommending solidarity in the approach to the issue, but some Latin Americans give evidence of hesitation, appearing to prefer to await an overt act in view of the French and German assurances current here.

Some idea of the impression Hull has gained from his informal sounding out of his colleagues may be gathered from the way he constantly refers to non-American governments as "foreign governments" when talking privately. It seems to be his determination that no "foreign government" shall become a factor in any American government's conduct of its inter-American relations or domestic affairs.

'Hero' Submarine Given Up as Lost

Britain's Salmon Figured in Epic North Sea Battle

By International News Service

London, July 21.—Unreported for several days, the world's most famous submarine, the Salmon, tonight was given up for lost by the British admiralty, bringing officially to an end one of the most spectacular careers of the present war.

The communique announcing the loss of the Salmon gave no clew to its fate, possibly because the admiralty, itself, knows nothing of how the vessel met her end.

It merely stated, in the traditionally terse sentences of the British navy, that the Salmon was "considerably overdue and must be given up for lost."

Besides Commander E. O. Bickford, whose feats of daring with the Salmon won him, at 30 years of age, promotion ahead of 300 senior officers, the submarine apparently carried to their deaths the 39 other officers and men of her heroic crew.

Attacked Two Cruisers

The Salmon's most spectacular feat was a daring foray through the mine-infested waters of Heligoland Bight to torpedo the Nazi cruiser Leipzig and another cruiser, partially identified as the Nurnberg, as they swung at anchor in the fancied safety of Wilhelmshaven.

On the same voyage, Bickford saw the crack Nazi liner Bremen loom up in his sights as she plowed through the North Sea on a dash to safety which carried her from New York to Bremen, via Murmansk, Russia, and let her escape—in conformity with international law.

News of the loss of the Salmon shocked the British public, which had taken the youthful commander to its heart not only for his cool disregard for danger but for his humanity in refraining from torpedoing the Bremen.

Spared Bremen

Bickford's report asserted that the big Nazi liner with her crew of more than 500 was full under his torpedo tubes, but that he refrained from firing the shots that would sink her because there was no time to give the crew fair warning.

After returning from his famous voyage in Mya, Bickford was married to Valerie Courtney, 22, daughter of Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney.

Loss of the Salmon brings to a total of 11 the British submarines lost since the outbreak of hostilities.

The Salmon was the second submarine of the Shark class lost within the last week, the Shark itself having been given up as lost Monday.

An improvement over the Swordfish class, the Salmon and Shark were two of the most successful submarines in the British navy, capable of a "crash dive" in 30 seconds.

They displaced 960 tons when submerged, were 202½ feet long and were armed with one 3-inch gun and one machine gun as well as six 21-inch torpedo tubes. The Salmon cost about $1,000,000 and was commissioned March 8, 1935.

France Adopts Hitler's Law To Keep Peasants on Land

Limit Is Raised on 'Indivisible' Estates; Newspapers and Radio Are Placed Under Control of Laval

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, July 21.—The French government borrowed a leaf from Adolf Hitler's law book today by raising the limits of an ancient Napoleonic law designed to keep intact ancestral estates.

By decree, the Petain regime boosted from 200,000 francs to 400,000 francs (about $2,000 to $4,000) the limit of "indivisible" property, which means that homesteads with a value up to the latter figure cannot be split up in wills and property endowments.

The owner of country property, for instance, must on death leave that property in this amount intact, even if several children share in his will.

Like Hitler's Law

This rule, similar to one Hitler put into effect in Germany soon after his rise to power, is expected to encourage Frenchmen to remain on their family property.

Under the Hitler law of October 2, 1933, creating an "Aryan peasant class," small land owners are virtually forbidden from selling or dividing their ancestral holdings among heirs. The inheritance falls to the eldest son or daughter.

Another decree, promulgated in the Government's campaign to rid itself of what it calls "deficiences" of the past regime, placed news and radio under direct control of Vice Premier Pierre Laval.

Among newly enforced food restrictions designed to meet feared shortages is one banning entirely in some departments the Frenchman's favorite croissant, a pastry which for generations has been washed down with morning coffee.

Finance Minister Yves Boutillier announced he would leave for Paris tomorrow to reestablish the finance ministry there. He expressed a desire to "see a speedy return of banks, insurance companies, large corporations and the reopening of the bourse."

Pierre Cathala, secretary general of communications, said telephone service employes would return to Paris Monday to restore operations.

Coal, Oil, Gas Lacking

Communications Minister Francois Pietri said in a radio broadcast that several years would be necessary to restore the French communications system to prewar standards.

He said lack of coal, oil, gasoline and rolling stock had reduced railroad and automobile traffic to an absolute minimum, and announced that 700 bridges and four large radio stations used for communication with France's colonies were destroyed in the war.

Meanwhile German dissatisfaction over the make-up of the government of Marshal Petain was viewed in political quarters as one of the obstacles to the return of the French government to Paris.

Nazis Maintain "Reserve"

The Paris press published a Berlin dispatch to the effect that Germany, "astonished to find in the new government the influence of men responsible for the war," is maintaining "extreme reserve toward French policy."

French sources said they considered the return of the government to Paris indispensable to cope with urgent problems. Facilities are lacking at Vichy.

Political differences arising between Vichy and Paris, where the Petain government has been received coldly, also was cited as a reason for the government's return if it is to smooth out matters.

No decision has been reached since Petain asked on July 11 for ministerial quarters in Paris and Versailles, but negotiations are being conducted by Leon Noel, the Vichy regime's delegate to German-held territory.

Hearing Tonight On Silver Spring Rezoning Pleas

Property owners are expected to crowd the hearing room of the Liquor Control Board Building, East West Highway, Silver Spring, Md., tonight at 7 to oppose rezoning of certain sections in Kensington and Silver Spring.

Petitions presented to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission ask for the reclassification of property to the commercial zone on the Dillon tract in Kensington, and the rezoning of the E. C. Powell and Kate Black land from residential "A" to residential "C". The Powell and Black properties are bounded by Colesville road, Spring, High and James streets.

Opposition to the application of William P. Dillon, jr., for rezoning of land on the southwest corner of Lincoln place and county road near the Baltimore and Ohio railroad overpass, has been voiced by the Kensington Chamber of Commerce and the town council.

Adams County Orders School Buses Inspected

Gettysburg, Pa., July 21.—Forty-five buses which will carry about 500 Adams County school children to and from their classes during the 1940-1941 school term have been ordered to Gettysburg and Biglersville for a rigid inspection by Pennsylvania State Motor Policemen on August 5 and 6. Arrangements for the inspection were made by Ira Y. Baker, county superintendent of schools.

Legion Plans Rites At Bethesda

A monument to Montgomery County World War dead at Bradley Lane and Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, will be dedicated tomorrow at 8 p. m., by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Post of the American Legion.

The monument consists of a concrete base upon which will be mounted a French 75 millimeter field gun. Post Commander Jack Irwin will preside at the dedication, which will be attended by county officials and representatives of civic groups. The Montgomery County Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will place a wreath at the monument.

Sidelights on the War Scene

Flaming British Bomber Blown to Bits by Its Own Bombs After Safe Landing, Minus Gear; Crew Leaps to Safety

Big Ship Fights Losing Battle Over North Sea

By the Associated Press

London, July 21.—The belly landing of a flaming British bomber and the crew's escape just as their load of bombs went off was described by the air ministry today.

The bomber was flying over the North Sea last week on the way to the German Ruhr when it met 12 enemy planes, three of which turned aside and attacked. One was shot down, but the others ignited the bomber's gas tank and disabled its retractable landing carriage as it made for home.

The plane cleared a coastal cliff by only 50 feet and slid to a stop across a field. The crew jumped out just as their own bombs blew the machine to fragments.

French Cathedrals Escape Damage

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, July 21.—It was learned today that the cathedrals at Chartres, Tours, Laval and Nantes had escaped damage during the recent military operations.

It is also known now that the traces of shells reported on one tower of the Rheims Cathedral date from the World War. At Chartres, the priceless stained glass had been removed from the cathedral soon after the opening of hostilities.

'Cob' Walls Defy German Bombs

London, July 21 (AP).—Centuries-old walls of "cob"—a mixture of mud and straw similar to the adobe of the American Southwest—withstood the heaviest blasts of high-explosive German bombs hurled on west Britain today, officials reported.

They said ceilings fell and windows fell and windows were shattered but the 3-foot-thick "cob" walls showed scarcely a crack.

No Reparations In Gold, Says Nazis

New York July 21 (AP).—The German radio today quoted an article by Dr. Joseph Winschuh, German economist, predicting that the victors in the present war would impost no reparations in gold or manufactured goods from the vanquished.

Instead, the economist was quoted as saying Germany would have restored "what it was robbed of" in raw materials and valuable rights.

The broadcast quoted from an article by Dr. Winschuh entitled "Looking Backward from the Year 2,000."

It said that again, as in the World War, the United States was thought to be the "greatest profiteer" and gathered almost all the world's gold, until gold came to be valueless outside the United States and the European economic exchange system won over the trade of South America. Finally, the United States, finding no other use for its vast gold reserves, used the gold to decorate public buildings and street lamps.

Britain Will Hold, Pertinax Thinks

By the Associated Press

New York, July 21.—Andre Geraud, the French political commentator, famed for his "pipe-line" forecasts of international developments, said today he thought the British would be able to withstand Germany's onslaught.

He would not amplify the opinion beyond stating, in response to a reporter's question, that it was based on more than just wishful thinking.

Geraud, who writes under the name Pertinax, arrived with his wife from Montreal. He reached Canada a few days ago on a British refugee ship.

He left France, he said, because he would not have been able to continue writing. He did not know whether he was on the German "black list" of writers who have criticized the Nazi regime.

Hitler's speech Friday, he remarked, was "the same one he made last October."

Youth Commits Most of U.S. Crime, Says Wilkinson

Sixty per cent of the Nation's crime is committed by young people between the ages of 16 and 23, State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson, of Montgomery County, asserted in a talk before members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Neelsville Presbyterian Church last night. He said that Maryland needs better facilities for handling delinquent children.

One-third increase in the work of the County Juvenile Court does not indicate that the young people of the county are getting worse, but it rather shows a tendency toward taking care of correction of children in court instead of in the home, he said.

Borrowed Battlefield

Almost every day during recent weeks Italian planes presumably based on Libya have bombarded the port of Alexandria and certain other ports of Egypt. Yet Italy and Egypt are not technically at war with each other.

Egypt's position with respect to the Anglo-Italian conflict is curiously anomalous. Egypt is not a belligerent, although circumstances may soon or late compel her to become one. At present her status is unlike that of any other nonbelligerent power. For while Egypt, the nation, is at peace, Egypt, the country, is very definitely in the war.

The reason for this strange duality in the Egyptian position traces back to the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of August 26, 1936, by which Egypt became an independent nation. That treaty restricted British military occupation in the land of the Pharaohs. But it did not call for immediate evacuation of British soldiers from all parts of Egypt.

British troops were to continue to be stationed in Cairo, Alexandria and Aboukir for an undetermined period, although they were gradually to be withdrawn from those points to bases in the Suez Canal Zone. At the end of 20 years British troops are to be withdrawn from that zone also if, in the meantime, Egypt is able to undertake the defense of the canal.

To begin with, therefore, the British troops stationed at Alexandria and the British fleet based on that harbor have unquestionable right to be there. Furthermore, the treaty stipulates that in time of war British troops will have freedom of movement in any part of Egypt, and the British navy will have full use of Alexandria and other naval ports. Last but not least, the pact provides that "should either of the high contracting parties become engaged in war, the other . . . will . . . immediately come to his aid in the capacity of an ally." But that aid does not include the use of Egyptian military power against Britain's enemy.

There has been no indication thus far that any Egyptian troops have been employed in any operations against Italy. Similarly Italy appears to have refrained from any direct attacks designed to bring Egyptian territory under Italian control. The state of "peace" which obtains between the two countries rests on this precarious circumstance. The Italian attacks in the Egyptian zone have been limited to aerial bombings of British concentrations in Egypt. Egypt's role, for the moment, appears to be that of a borrowed battlefield.

Ban On Ghost Writing?

Mr. Mark Sullivan is frankly delighted to hear that Candidate Wendell L. Willkie intends to write his own campaign speeches. In Mr. Sullivan's opinion a refusal to use ghost writers has "a special and precious quality." It means, he says, "that a man is what he seems to be."

Mr. Sullivan's criticism of the kind of ghost writing which permits obscure individuals to mould public policies is well taken. No one can doubt that that kind of ghost writing is utterly vicious because it shifts responsibility for policy-making to the shoulders of irresponsible hirelings. But when this occurs, blame attaches to the lazy or careless public servants who let others think for them. It does not follow that busy officials must undertake the time-consuming tasks of assembling data for speeches and putting the material into proper form.

It is safe to guess that if Mr. Willkie should enter the White House he would often have to surrender "the integrity of his personality" to the extent of letting ghost writers provide the material and most of the framework for speeches and official communications. Indeed, there are certain types of public statements that have to be prepared largely by experts, even though they may bear the signature of the President.

Provided the ghost writer sticks to instructions, and the principal makes certain that his personal views are being set forth accurately, there is nothing to condemn and much to approve in a practice that lightens the labors of overworked public officials. Moral disapproval of the system springs from our habit of regarding the spoken or written "speech" as a literary effort for which credit should be given the author. But this is a rather naive conception of the nature and the function of official utterances.

Men of great ability, with the power of leadership, sometimes lack the gift of facile or accurate expression. Such an official may reveal his real self more fully with the aid of a ghost writer than by relying upon his own stumbling efforts at self-expression. It is principles and policies that are important, not whether the diction and syntax employed are the product of a hired pen.

Legislators' Burden

Congress resumes its work today with a heavy legislative burden hanging over it. In the hectic weeks preceding the national party conventions Congress passed numerous defense bills with extraordinary haste. Yet it left unanswered many questions vital to our domestic welfare as well as to our national security.

In some respects the respite provided by the political conventions should be an advantage to the legislators who are shaping our national policies. It has given many of them an opportunity to consult with representative men and women from their home States. And a considerable number have probably taken advantage of this breathing spell to analyze afresh the problems that are crowding upon Congress for solution.

When an emergency in national defense suddenly loomed up on the European horizon Congress acted with commendable dispatch to strengthen our inadequate naval and military forces. Both the Senate and House demonstrated their responsiveness to changing conditions and to the public will. In addition to voting enormous sums for new defense weapons, they loosened restrictions upon the Army and Navy so that those agencies may now move full speed ahead with their program designed to secure the entire Western Hemisphere against attack.

It is no disparagement of this record to point out that only the easiest part of the task has been performed. Congressmen are now returning to Washington to face more baffling problems: How shall the defense program be financed? How shall the man power of the Nation be organized for defense without encroachment upon rights and privileges that the people have long cherished? How far should the United States go in extending economic ties with Latin America in the interest of hemispheric solidarity?

It is not to be supposed that these and similar difficult issues will be fully explored and disposed of at the present session. But they ought to be faced realistically by this Congress as well as its successors. Congress has been bold in authorizing expenditures. It will have to be courageous, too, in voting new taxes and expanding available reserves of trained men. And, if grave mistakes are to be avoided, that courage will have to be tempered by a large measure of good judgment.

A few weeks ago Congress was warmly applauded for enactment of a billion-dollar tax bill in an election year. But that sum now seems insignificant beside the enormous expenditures approved and contemplated. Representative Daniel A. Reed says that Congress has already voted at this session to spend more than $15,500,000,000 in appropriations and contract authorizations. Requests still before Congress, he notes, bring this total to more than $20,000,000,000.

Senator Walsh estimates that the two-ocean Navy bill signed by the President on Saturday will cost taxpayers $10,000,000,000 over a number of years. To raise the enormous sums required for adequate national defense will require sacrifices of every man and woman in the United States. Is Congress willing to face that fact and enact tax and economy bills accordingly? This issue is likely to provide one of the severest tests to which American democracy has ever been subjected.

So it is well that Congress has had a breathing spell. It faces a dilemma of enormous proportions. The people demand national security without the accompaniment of either bankruptcy or totalitarianism. If Congress at its present and future sessions fails to solve this basic problem, nothing else it may do will be of much consequence.

Accelerated Justice

Justice Bolitha J. Laws' report on the acceleration of trials in the District Court is news of far-reaching importance. To thousands of Washingtonians it holds out a promise that justice will soon be within their immediate grasp instead of being postponed to some indefinite day that may never come.

After years of talking and planning for the introduction of efficiency into the courts, it appears that an effective formula has at last been put into practice. As pointed out by Dillard Stokes in The Post of yesterday, the District Court disposed of more than twice as many cases in the year just ended as it handled in the previous 12 months. Only one additional justice out of a total of 12 was on the bench when this promising record was made.

Undoubtedly much of this improvement must be accredited to the new pretrial division set up in accord with the simplified rules of procedure promulgated two years ago by the Supreme Court. Instead of wasting the time of judges, juries, witnesses and lawyers proving facts on which both sides can agree, the pretrial judge now strips cases down to actual controversial points. It is not surprising that in this process of seeking agreement between the parties on issues that are not in dispute many cases are finally compromised and never need go to trial.

These rational methods give lawyers less opportunity to demonstrate their forensic skill. But they also more faithfully serve the cause of justice for litigants. If the court continues its rapid progress in disposing of old cases, its civil calendar may be current a year hence. Delays were reduced to a minimum in the criminal division of the court a year ago.

There is no reason to believe, however, that the pretrial system has operated automatically to produce these gratifying results. No doubt the excellent record of the last year is due largely to the conscientious manner in which Justice Laws has worked out this simplified procedure. It is the combination of simple, effective rules with the services of diligent and intelligent judges that produces justice of a high order.

A Poor Excuse

Because Herbert Hoover retained his post as Secretary of Commerce while campaigning for the Presidency in 1928, Henry A. Wallace apparently thinks he has discovered a precedent justifying his intention to remain Secretary of Agriculture while he campaigns for the Vice Presidency. His inclination to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Hoover may sharpen the hostility of many Democrats toward his nomination. But it certainly will not silence the critics who believe that the distribution of Federal subsidies should be divorced from politics.

If Mr. Wallace seeks the guidance of precedent, it is not necessary to look backward or to go outside of the party to which he now gives allegiance. For Paul V. McNutt has quite recently provided him with an example of correct conduct well worthy of emulation. Mr. McNutt evidently considered it improper to remain as active head of the Federal Security Agency while campaigning for the Democratic Presidential nomination. He did not resign because to have done so might have given rise to misinterpretation of his motives. But he did the next best thing by requesting a leave of absence for the months preceding the election. The fact that his plans miscarried does not, of course, affect the question at issue.

Mr. McNutt, as head of an organization disbursing large sums for the benefit of special groups, occupies a position in many respects analagous to that of Mr. Wallace. But there is a vast difference between the position of the Secretary of Agriculture in 1940 and that of the Secretary of Commerce in 1928. Secretary Wallace is in charge of a department that now has an appropriation of over $1,000,000,000 annually. Furthermore, by virtue of his position he heads and to a large extent can control the lending policies of the Federal Government's vast and complex system of agricultural credit.

Mr. Hoover, on the other hand, was head of a department that spent only $34,000,000 in 1928, chiefly for the development of trade and commercial services, entailing no subsidies or loans to private persons.

The fact that the cost of operation of the Department of Commerce was not of a size or of a character to attract votes for its head does not, of course, absolve Mr. Hoover from criticism for failing to resign. The headship of an executive department of the Government is a full-time job. And the man who undertakes such duties cannot discharge them efficiently if he is conducting an active campaign for office.

Mr. Wallace has not strengthened his case, therefore, by inferentially approving Mr. Hoover's mistakes of judgment. It can, however, be said on behalf of the former President that his failure to resign his post could not have had any perceptible influence upon election returns. In Mr. Wallace's case, on the contrary, the farm voters may be very much influenced in his favor if he appears before them not only as a candidate for the Vice Presidency but also as the official dispenser of agricultural loans and subsidies running annually into hundreds of millions of dollars.

No Daughter To Guide Her

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

A motherly lady in Kansas City took the wheel of an automobile for the first time the other day with her daughter beside her to give advice. The first advice was to back out of the family drive, but the lady in rapid succession took a corner off her own garage, entered the front and went out through the back of a neighbor's garage, tore a corner off another neighbor's house, sped quartering across a street, jumped a high curb, choked the motor, and stopped. Since the best-laid plans of mice and men often go agley—whatever that is—it turned out the mother had had no daughter to guide her. Daughter had fainted while the corner of the first garage was being blitzkrieged. It was just one of those things that will happen in a motorized age to some people, and if you must have a moral you can figure it out for yourself.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I take it upon myself to remind the scholars, statesmen and politicians of this Nation to remember the Nation to which we young men and women have pledged our allegiance.

Ever since we were six years of age and entered in public school we have, regularly, "Pledged allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands. One Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Our advice to those who are now pondering compulsory military training is to refrain from taking any hasty action. We go even further and boldly state, in the interest of freedom, any such drastic action will destroy the Nation to which we have pledged our allegiance.

Our allegiance is not to America first and freedom second. Our allegiance is first to "liberty and justice for all" and then to the Nation which is the protector of these.

We stand first before God. Following this first allegiance we have concern for the institutions of men. And should any of men's institutions and constitutions be at sword's point with man's God-given, unalienable rights then we are very definitely against these works in the defense of these rights.

Between slavery and freedom we can see no resemblance. And we don't proposed to accept a compromise.

If you institute reforms which will destroy freedom, as we know it, this Nation shall no longer be indivisible—it will be divided. On the one side will be those who think nothing of lowering the individual to the status of the beast. We, on the other side shall uphold the rights of men, as individuals, even unto iron bars, shackles and death.

RAYMOND A. WAUGH.
Columbus, Ohio, July 18.

Pertinent Questions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your very fine expose of the Monroe Doctrine, in The Post of July 13, you fail to point out that for the past 35 years we had completely discarded that doctrine and were persistently meddling in European affairs to the extent of fighting overseas in the previous World War.

Had we, on September 3, 1939, made a complete volte-face, stopped meddling, and revived the Monroe Doctrine—our stand would have been perfectly logical, but we continued and are continuing to apply "methods short of war," meddling in every conceivable way, even to changing our legislation to suit the side we favor, and violently stirring up public opinion against the other.

We can't do all that and at the same time proclaim the Monroe Doctrine without making ourselves look foolish.

But even that is not the point, for it is not what that doctrine contains which is all-important. The important point is the principle upon which it is based. One nation among a group of free and independent nations sets itself up as legislator in matters of foreign and even internal policy for the entire group, decrees what can and what cannot be done within boundaries set up to suit that one nation.

That is where both the novelty of the doctrine and its danger lie.

Such supremacy of one nation over her neighbors has throughout history as yet been achieved only by conquest. We do not wish to conquer—yet we wish to rule.

Is our prestige great enough? And can that attitude coupled with the lack of the "big stick" fail to bring upon us some very serious unpleasantness?

These are the questions all loyal Americans should be asking themselves today.

EUGENIA LE MAT.
Washington, July 13.

For Modernization of Army

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is the mode of military training antiquated? West Point training as taught today will soon be a thing of the past. The mechanized unit now used in war with airplanes, guns and bombs used by the Germans has changed the whole picture from the days of cannons, cavalry and infantry. All are shoved in a secondary position and the training that is given at West Point in handling infantry, cavalry and gun companies, should be changed to tanks, flame throwers, gases, airplanes and airplane divers and how to handle and manipulate them in battle. To get the best results, the United States does not need great numbers of trained men for defense, but a few efficient ones trained in handling tanks, both large and small, fast and slow, with cannons or flame throwers.

The Government should have a technical college, a one-year course, and every year a certain number should be sent from every State, per capita, to be trained as technicians in the modern machinery of war; tanks and airplane pilots and also how to make airplanes and engines. This would in a few years give the Government a great reserve of fine mechanics and pilots and would give the graduates a fine trade.

Annapolis could make many changes very beneficial to our defense. The big, bulky men-of-war have had their day. The small, very fast battleships are more the up-to-date vessel. Annapolis could follow the same line as laid down for West Point. Crews for submarines and chasers and their manufacturing could be trained every year. These training courses would not be compulsory, but thousands of young men would be only too glad to get such a training free of expense.

There is talk of compulsory military training. A ground work for infantrymen should be made compulsory in all public schools, ages 14 to 16 years. Compulsory military training in camps set up by the Government would not supply the need wanted by the Nation to defend itself and would disorganize the commercial hook-up of the country, taking so many young men out of business and furnishing a big army of militia, which play but a small part in a modern war. France, England and all the small nations of Europe made that mistake. Germany was modernized for war—the result we know now.

It is said France had the finest army in Europe of 7,000,000 men and that 500,000 trained mechanics in traveling forts cut them to pieces. It seems to me that the setup at Annapolis and West Point belongs to the past ages. Will the Government cut the red tape and snap into modernism in war defense? The people of the United States would feel easier in mind.

F. G. THOMAS, SR.
Somerville, N. J., July 14.

An 1809 Platform

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is so little doubt the Presidential candidates of the major political parties will profess adherence to Jeffersonian democracy, public opinion ought to be provided with a short summary. Thus a friendly gauge may be maintained upon the candidates. Nothing could be more wholesome for the Nation at this juncture than a full-hearted affirmation of Jeffersonian principles.

The following excerpts are from page 14 of "A Circular Letter from the General Republican Committee of the City and County of New York, etc." (105 pages) 1809:

"We are equally the friends of agriculture, manufacturing and commerce . . . We hold that each occupation of life is entitled alike to the protection of Government . . . The agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests, instead of being rivals to each other, are mutual auxiliaries . . . The agricultural interest may be considered the most valuable, because it is the principal foundation of the whole . . . Instead, therefore, of fomenting a spirit of jealousy and rivalship, between these connected interests, we ought rather to evince their correspondent value to each other . . ."

MOSES H. DOUGLASS.
Lempster, N. H., July 16.

Gold Standard

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An article in a daily paper of July 16 starts off by stating that "The United States and Britain began yesterday to map plans for a financial counter-attack on Nazi Germany in an unprecedented battle to maintain gold as an international currency."

The article ended by stating "Thus it is believed that the conversations" (between Secretary Morgenthau and Sir Frederick Phillips, British undersecretary of the treasury) "have as their object the finding of some means to combat Nazi 'work standard theories' which threaten the accepted gold standard economics of the democracies."

The war behind the war, i. e. the gold standard nations versus those who have already farsightedly abandoned the gold standard fallacy, is therefore on.

Is this to mean that the many thousands of individuals in this country who long ago realized that gold could not remain forever the so-called base of our currency, which leads to our currency being predicated on debt based on that gold, are necessarily pro-Nazi and that the American people are unthinkingly to be led to believe that they are necessarily solidly behind the British treasury in trying to rehabilitate the gold standard?

H. J. SUTTON.
Washington, July 17.

The Monroe Doctrine

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In trying to prove the consistency of President Monroe in his famous message to Congress, Mr. Felix Morley lacks that consistency, so it seems to me, in his article of July 13, when he deducts from the second part of the Monroe Doctrine the principle of non-involvement in European affairs. Not to interfere may be a wise policy, which I doubt it is under all imaginable circumstances. But I am unable to stretch my imagination to a point where "the internal affairs of any of its (Europe's) powers" in, which "not to interfere . . . is . . . our policy" becomes identical with aggressive acts of invasion of one power against the other.

Nor do I agree with Mr. Morley's implied opinion that the principle "to consider the government de facto as the legitimate government for us" is applicable to de facto governments sponsored and installed by foreign powers.

The Post Impressionist

When people talk about the business world, they usually mean department stores, banks and factories. Most of them don't know about the business world they walk through every day, the world of newsstands, push carts, policemen, taxi drivers, panhandlers, shoeshine boys, and all the rest of us.

I run a newsstand. It is on the sidewalk, but it has a fixed location, and to operate it properly we have a day shift and a night shift. Thus I am a stable figure of the business world—a sort of sidewalk Marshall Field, you might say. I am the night shift.

All evening they go by. Some stop to look my stand over—new faces, new questions. A newsstand man is supposed to know everything. I've made it a rule never to answer a question with "I don't know." If I don't know the answer, I try to find it.

The day customers are different from the night customers, even though they are the same people. The day customers are the working people. The night customers are the same people, playing.

Tony is the day shift. He manages the stand. He taught me how to say "All finished" in Italian. One night a friend of Tony's asked for "Il Progresso." "Tutti fineti," I warbled. Right there I made a mistake because the fellow came back at me with a line of Italian a block long. It took me five minutes to convince him that I couldn't understand it. My accent must be good.

"May I help you, lady? You want a magazine for a woman in a maternity hospital? Well, I don't think that 'Murder Tales' is a good selection."

There goes a panhandler to tell his tale of hunger to that old lady. She'll give him a dime and he'll give it to the nearest barkeep.

The young woman who just bought that Communist paper has a "tops" position with the Government.

"Is that good looking officer on the corner married? You mean 'Whitey?' Yes, young lady, he is, and he has a daughter as old as you." That'll burn "Whitey" up.

Old men buy our comic books. Better than newspapers, they claim.

This private detective from the Munsey Building buys nonfiction detective magazines. He claims they put him to sleep.

Here comes "Whitey," the officer, with a coat in his hand. Inside the coat is the panhandler who got the dime from the old lady.

"A magazine for ladies? Yes, ma'am. I have Mademoiselle, Vogue, Lure, McCalls, Glamour, The Woman——" I might have known she'd buy an Esquire.

Here comes a girl that I heard talking to her girl friend the other day. She was swearing to the g. f. that the Daily Worker was a bargain even at a dollar a copy. Then she swore at me when I charged her a nickel for it. Said she never paid over 3 cents for it. Wish I didn't carry it.

"No, ma'am, we don't have bobby pins." We're only a newsstand. Maybe we should expand.

"The next mail plane to Chicago? Leaves here at 10:05 tonight. Your letter will be in Chi at 4:05 tomorrow morning."

Roxyettes always buy the papers that write up their shows.

One of my customers asked me yesterday to get him a Washington Post of April, 1924. When I told him the price of the paper, he almost fainted. It would cost him $16, I said. No sale.

Please call a cab for me . . . Where is the nearest postoffice? . . . Did you see a lady pass here with a funny-looking hat on? . . . Who won the ball game? . . . Where can I get a car for the Zoo? . . . Free information. It's a good thing I'm fat and good-natured.

Colored shoeshine boys break into a run, leaving the customer with one dull shoe. The law approaches.

Marines and sailors stroll past, arm in arm. It was never thus in 1918.

I'm the guy that catches it when the newspaper print is blurred.

Stand here with me for 15 minutes and I'll show you Senators, Representatives, actors, authors, G-men, bookies, people from every walk of life, trying to relax.

Corner men and car hoppers waiting on the steps for the "bull dog" edition, tell each other how the war should be run. Now and then, two of them differ and they hie to the alley to have it out. Officers seldom interfere.

Washington, the city beautiful, the city of wonderful buildings, spacious parks, grand statues, bubbling fountains, all very beautiful, but some evening remind me to show you the side of city life that will make your flesh creep.

"Paper, sir?"

Care of Pets

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is the question of provision for pets at vacation time. Those who cannot afford to board their pets in kennels should ask if some neighbor would be willing to care for the animal, but if this is not possible, the Washington Animal Rescue League will send their ambulance for unwanted animals. The league, however, is not able to board pets. No animal can take care of itself.

New King Ministry

By Our Ottawa Correspondent

Conservatives Still Dissatisfied

Ottawa.

THE REORGANIZATION of the federal ministry, which Premier Mackenzie King announced to the House of Commons on July 8, brings some useful new blood into the cabinet and relieves some hard-worked ministers of burdens which had become too heavy.

Mr. Angus Macdonald, the Liberal premier of Nova Scotia, who moves into the federal arena for the first time to take charge of a newly created department of naval affairs, is an able and attractive politician, who will strengthen the ministry. Col. Colin Gibson, who is given the ministry of national revenue, although he only made his parliamentary debut two months ago, is counted one of the most promising recruits that the Liberal Party has secured for some time.

Mr. Ilsley, the former minister of national revenue, who takes over the department of finance from Col. Ralston, should fill that important post efficiently and Mr. Howe, the minister of munitions and supply, is set free to concentrate upon the production of munitions by the transference of most of the branches of the department of transport to the care of Mr. Cardin, the minister of public works.

Mr. Gardiner, the minister of agriculture, is allocated the new department of national war, but will retain his original portfolio until a successor, possibly Premier Bracken of Manitoba, is found. The appointment, which encounters most criticism is that of Mr. W. P. Mulock as postmaster general, and the reason popularly ascribed for it is a sentimental desire of Premier King to show his gratitude to the new minister's grandfather, the veteran Sir William Mulock, still vigorous in his middle nineties, who when he was postmaster general in the Laurier cabinet nearly 40 years ago, brought Mr. King into the public service as deputy minister of labor.

BUT THE CABINET remains a purely Liberal ministry and the reorganization has done nothing to appease the widespread demand for a genuine national ministry in which all parties would be represented. Mr. King, however, disclosed what was an open secret that he had made overtures to a number of prominent Conservatives, none of them in Parliament, but all holding high positions in the business world, to enter the cabinet, but had been met by refusals in every case. So he argued that having done his best to broaden the basis of his government, he was entitled to fall back for new recruits upon the resources of his own party and that the mandate which had been given last March to a purely Liberal administration still held good.

He also contended that by retaining a party character for his ministry he was helping to preserve the parliamentary system of democracy, because its maintenance required the existence of an opposition capable of providing an alternative ministry. However, he evidently realized that the country was far from satisfied with a partisan administration of the national war effort and so he made an offer that Mr. Hanson, the leader of the Conservative Party, and Mr. Grote Stirling, a former minister of national defense, should become associate members of the special war committee of the cabinet or in the alternative should hold regular consultations wth ministers about war policies; he also stated that if they accepted the offer, it would be extended to the leaders of the C. C. F. and Social Credit parties.

BUT THE CONSERVATIVE leaders had naturally taken umbrage at Mr. King's action in courting other non-parliamentary Conservatives in preference to themselves and were in no mood to accept either of his offers. Mr. Hanson formally rejected them on the ground that they offered responsibility without power. The leaders of the C. C. F. and Social Credit parties took a similar line and so for the time being there will be no change in the political setup at Ottawa.

But papers like the Toronto Globe and Mail and the Montreal Gazette are continuing their crusade for a national ministry and if further reverses are suffered in Europe, the increased public support which would be given to it, would force Mr. King to abandon his present position.

FOR SOME time to come the busiest of the ministers will be Mr. Gardiner. He has been entrusted with the national registration of all citizens of Canada over 16 years of age. Preparations for it are already well advanced and use will be made of the machinery for taking the census and for holding federal elections. The date for the registration to begin will probably be August 19 and it is expected to occupy four days during which everybody liable to register will have to present themselves before local registrars and fill in the requisite forms.

After the registration the names of men between the ages of 21 and 45 will be segregated and they will be divided into two classes, immediate and deferred, the latter being composed of individuals engaged in what will be defined by the government as essential industries like the manufacture of aeroplanes and munitions. In the "immediate" classes, who will have to undergo military training as soon as possible, no exemptions will be permitted except for members of religious orders and a few other categories.

The first class to be called up will be single men of the age of 21. Young men who marry after July 16 will be classified as single, and one result of this decision was a sudden epidemic of hastily arranged marriages during the week-end preceding July 15. Its incidence was particularly widespread in the Province of Quebec, where the idea of compulsory military service is not popular. In some communities there were mass marriages in which as many as 18 couples were simultaneously united in wedlock.

Mr. Gardiner tried to allay the uneasiness in Quebec by explaining that the registration was for military training and not necessarily for military service. But when the bill came before the Senate Senator Meighen, the Conservative leader, criticized it severely on the ground that there was no provision in it making the men who were called up for training liable to fight if an emergency arose.

THE STATISTICS of the last census taken in 1931 show that there are between 700,000 and 800,000 Canadians within the age ranges of 21 and 34 but owing to the lack of trained instructors and camp facilities they must obviously be trained in instalments. The military authorities have been doing their best to muster instructors from the veterans of the last war and to enlarge the existing camps. But at the best they do not expect to be able to handle more than 50,000 by the middle of September, and it may even be necessary to keep the first class of draftees who are to be called up on or before September 15 below that number.

MR. MACKENZIE KING

It is planned to give them 40 days training in camp and by the time this is finished the Canadian winter will be looming in sight. It will not be possible to give more than a second batch their training in camp before next spring. The draftees will be paid at the rate of $1.20 per day but no allowances will be available for any dependents, although there is a suggestion that the government may insist upon employers paying at least half wages to their workers, who are called up, during the training period.

Plans are also being worked out to give young men who are engaged in the essential industries training drill two or three nights each week. Meanwhile recruiting for the Canadian Active Service which wants 40,000 recruits as soon as possible, is being actively pushed and Col. Ralston, who has now settled down at the Ministry of Defense, recently stated that they were coming in at the rate of 1,000 per day.

THE EVACUATION of British children to Canada has been proceeding on a substantial scale and every week one or more shiploads are arriving. So far the movement has been conducted purely under private auspices and the majority of the children who have arrived belong to upper-class families who have relatives or friends in Canada ready to receive them into their homes. Plans have been discussed for moving with governmental assistance children, whose parents cannot afford to pay for their passage and maintenance in Canada, but apparently some difficulties have arisen and this scheme has been postponed.

The Canadian government, however, has decided to put a brake upon the movement en masse of groups of children from British residential schools to Canadian schools. There have recently been cases where batches of such children have shipped on the strength of representations that full arrangements had been made and funds provided for their maintenance in Canada. When they arrived it was discovered that the arrangements were wholly inadequate and the children would have been in unfortunate straits, but for the generosity of some rich Canadians and offers of hospitality in private homes.

The Great Frontier

BEGINNING WITH a restatement of the most vital and distinctive principle of American political faith, "Two Frontiers of Freedom," by John Corbin (Scribners, $3.50), is more than timely; it is overdue. For a century that principle has been steadily obscured and denied; yet the result of its neglect proves its necessity. It is simply that the United States was not designed as a democracy. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Corbin does not bring out clearly either the philosophical axiom in question or the substantial basis on which it was put in effect. He dwells on the method of checks and balances, but apparently without observing that a mechanism is significant only by its prime purpose.

Furthermore, the "two frontiers" countenances a prevalent notion that the land was settled because it was there anyhow; and meanwhile the industrial energy era just happened. In fact, both developments had the same cause. They were the direct outcome of the political concept generalized in the Declaration of Independence and given form in the Constitution. Freedom itself was our frontier.

Yet it must be said that Mr. Corbin's book is valuable for its presentation of the early historic scene, and its suggestion of the magnificent antinomies of the intellect back of it.

The chief difficulty, which Mr. Corbin does not wholly avoid, is the failure to distinguish between materialistic and spiritual connotations. Thus, equality of rights is examined as a "biological" proposition—as if Jefferson must have been under the misapprehension that all men had red hair, like himself. The meaning was the idea of personality, of the soul, translated into political terms. This was the first secular application of the doctrine, but it still retained the sanction of a divine origin. It is, of course, the antithesis of democracy, being the assertion of individual right against majority power. In the last 100 years, however, democracy has been increasingly advocated, in opposition to the American principle, because there is no moral quality in numbers; and democracy is in accord with Marxist materialism. Democracy is the totalitarian state, as it is also the shortest cut to an avowed dictatorship.

Now, in our time, the immensely higher potentiality of physical power thrown into Europe, which had been slowly adapted to sufficient freedom for a commercial order, first fused the political organization into dictatorships, and then blew it up. All efforts were bent toward imposing more rigid "control," the one fatal measure. Likewise, every well meant effort of America to "reconstruct" Europe aggravated the trouble by pouring in money, which is a transmission line of energy, and supplying machinery, both of which went to the political agencies.

Mr. Corbin's suggestions, though vague in detail, tend toward the same disastrous end. He wants some kind of federation of "Atlantic civilization," though no other people has our individualistic concept; and he wants a "superpower" to run it to "impose justice" on the world. He also wants, within this country, an "industrial state," involving "national," that is political, "aid and control." That would be the hookup which would cause fusion and explosion.

An industrial system utilizing dynamic energy will not operate at all (beyond explosion) except in a political system of individualism, which generated it. There is historic consistency in the fact that our next President may be an experienced power executive; he may know better than to throw the switch the wrong way. It should be observed also that the tendency of dynamic power in this country remains in line with individualism, as it is toward smaller dynamo units and decentralization. All our power developments have obeyed that axiom when let alone, as, for example, motor cars came in succession to railroads. It is the true genius of the American which can and should be trusted.

A real merit of the first part of Mr. Corbin's book is that it depicts the intellectual development of the founders in honest debate and counsel. The recognition of Washington as a statesman, of the indispensable value of his moderation, magnanimity and integrity, is a fine appreciative study.

The Time Factor At Havana

Havana.

THE MEETING of American foreign ministers which convened in this city Saturday is as yet only in its formative stage. It is still too early to discover the direction in which the discussions will move, let alone forsee their ultimate outcome. There is no disguising the fact, however, that the meeting is taking place in an atmosphere of real urgency. The time factor which previous international parleys have been able to ignore is now of primary importance.

The vital question which faces the 21 American republics today is not whether they have the willingness and capacity to cooperate but whether they can do so with the speed and to the extent necessary to cope with the problems that have arisen and may arise out of the revolutionary change in the European and world balance of power.

PAN AMERICANISM has been a slow growth. Yet under normal circumstances there would be no reason to complain of the progress which has been made in the course of the years in the direction of establishing a true community of interest, outlook and attitude in this hemisphere.

That progress has been particularly noteworthy during the past decade. The great Pan American congresses held successively at Montevideo, Buenos Aires and Lima did far more than make platonic gestures in the direction of inter-American cooperation. They laid foundations upon which, given time, an impressive structure can be built. But whether the nations of the New World will be given that time to create in this hemisphere the kind of international system they all want to see established and which would be strong enough to prevent the Americas from having repeated on their soil the grim developments which have taken place abroad, is by no means certain.

THERE IS a race going on in this hemisphere between cooperation and disaster. The race is no different from that which occurred in Europe after the World War. Had the nations of the Old World been vouchsafed sufficient time there might have developed there a cooperative system so strong that it could have withstood all efforts to undermine it. Indeed, in the nonpolitical sphere considerable progress was made in that direction. But the failure to make such cooperation complete led to the catastrophe whose full dimensions it is almost impossible for the human mind to grasp.

It would be foolhardy not to take into account the possibility that Europe's tragic history will be repeated on this side of the Atlantic. A German triumph over Britain would create a situation whose ultimate consequences might be just that. And there is every reason to believe that if triumphant Germany will do all in her power, to disrupt the slowly emerging unity of the Americas.

She will do so—and she has for some years already been engaged in doing so—by attempting to undermine the internal stability of individual nations, by setting one nation against another. She will do so by exerting the enormous economic power that would be hers with all of Europe subject to her orders, by political means, by propaganda and, when the time is ripe, by military measures as well.

IT IS THIS threat which prompting the summoning of the meeting being held here and it is indicative of the new spirit which exists in this hemisphere that, despite the short notice, all 21 republics are represented, although not all of them by their foreign ministers. In other words the present world emergency at least finds the American nations ready and willing to employ the consultative machinery which was made available to them as a result of the deliberations at Montevideo, Buenos Aires, Lima and Panama in the years between 1933 and 1939.

The present meeting is not empowered to take final action on any of the problems which it is called upon to consider. Its function is very largely exploratory. It can, however, decide whether and to what extent there exists a common basis of action in the fields of hemisphere defense and economic cooperation. The actual implementation of the findings of the delegates will be left to the respective governments and to further meetings called to work out details.

In other words, it would be unwise to expect anything spectacular and revolutionary to develop from the conversations that are being held here. But it would be equally unwise to assume that the meeting will be barren of constructive results. The Havana parley must be regarded as further evidence that the nations of the New World are drawing closer. The unanswered question is whether that drawing together can be speeded up so that the Americas can present a united front to any threat from abroad. But that, in turn, depends to a very large extent on the course of events in Europe.

Shabby Treatment

IT IS NOT GIVEN to every man to listen to the eulogies of his own wake, but Jim Farley enjoyed that experience last week.

The testimonial lunch and the testimonial dinner, as a rule, are tawdry travesties on friendship arranged by pushful satellites with intent to gratiate themselves with the guest of honor or conspired in cold blood as a means of selling at $5 a place the standard dollar blue plate and a lot of drinks for the benefit of some one who runs a restaurant. In known cases, the promoters have taken back the satchel or loving cup presented to the monkey amid flower pots of praiseful sayings and put them aside to serve the same purpose again.

The little ceremonies for Mr. Farley last week were arranged wholly and almost devoutly in his honor by the journalists, men and women, of the Washington corps who have known him since 1932, or a little while before, and were attended by other reporters from many cities who have met him on his tours.

Walter Trohan, Turner Catledge and some lady journalist whom I did not recognize made little speeches in presenting him with unpretentious gifts which were not reclaimed as he went out, and James himself spoke off the record in a manner which could not heighten the company's admiration but made them wish he might be quoted so the public might fully enjoy knowing Jim.

Not by any word or sign from Mr. Farley has the public learned this week of the shabby treatment which he has suffered, and, inasmuch as he has not indicated hurt or resentment, even by the subtle sign or the rolling eye of the martyr, I will not spoil the party. He does not want to be pitied or to exploit the ingratitude which has been shown him, to the detriment of the Democratic Party, which still ranks about third in his loyalties, after God and country and just in front of the American League.

Jim has been the biggest man in Chicago last week, and it is unfortunate that I have bound myself not to be mean, because only by standing him alongside others would it be possible to show the size of him. He has personified the best qualities of the Irish-American in politics, and his conduct and character should be an example and warning, as I know they will not, to others of the same persuasion. But it can be said that Jim Farley was not among the men that Father Lord, the noted journalist, had in mind when he wrote his strong but little-read spiritual admonition to Catholic captains of American politics, entitled open letter to a boss.

Almost six years ago Jim was planning to retire from the Cabinet, having, as he claimed, put the Post Office Department on a self-sustaining basis, and go back into business to make some money for his family. Now, having waived many opportunities to recoup, he goes out not merely broke but owing money.

By contrast with those politicians who acquire savings and profits far in excess of their total pay during their years in office, Jim served at a great sacrifice, for the job entailed expenses out of proportion to the pay and allowances.

It has been said that just as Jim made President Roosevelt eight years ago, the President this week, by a negative process, made Jim, and that is not acrimony. It was his clean deportment under these conditions which suddenly made the convention realize that the finest man in the party was being driven out of its councils.

It has been only a few years since the term "Farleyism" was used to describe the spoils system, because Jim was the job-master of the new Administration, as though spoils were something which he had just invented. Farley took it without flinching, although he was just carrying the target for the entire party. And political prigs, calling themselves idealists, who made a show of holding their noses at the sordidness of Farleyism, later exploited the want of the destitute and the money-power placed in their hands to create a spoils system much more dangerous and ruthless.

It is too bad that Mr. Joe Tumulty and Gene Buck have not been here this week to rock in their chairs and moan "ochone" and "wurra" for Jim. Mr. Tumulty and Mr. Buck can hold wake and weep like a wather-pitcher on the merest mention of any deceased Dorsey or Clancy, or even a Protestant or Guinsberg, if the wind is off the sea with a taste of fog in it.

They would have had a beautiful time God-resting the soul of Jim Farley this week, and him around and about to hear it all.

Pass me the bothel, Mike, I'll be sitting up a while meself.

Farley and McNutt

By Ernest K. Lindley

Two Beloved Sportsmen

HOWEVER SHARPLY they disagree over policies and personalities, Democrats, like other Americans, still respond to good sportsmanship. Accordingly, the two men who emerged as the most popular and probably the biggest of the Democratic National Convention were Paul V. McNutt and James A. Farley.

Both had had from the inner circle of White House intimates what can only be described as a raw deal, for which the President cannot be absolved of all blame. Yet both played their parts at the Convention with poise and outward cheerfulness, and a correctness which lifted them above their erstwhile critics.

In McNutt's case good sportsmanship called for real sacrifice. On Thursday morning his managers had promises of enough votes to bring about his nomination for Vice President, probably on the second ballot. McNutt had received also the assurances of Harry Hopkins that on any list of acceptable running mates which the President might submit, McNutt's name would be included.

MR. McNUTT
"Without his help Wallace probably could not have been nominated."

Then, about noon, came the word that the President wanted Wallace. McNutt was called to Hopkins' suite at the Blackstone Hotel, informed of the decision, and asked to throw in his hand and second Wallace's nomination. Satisfied by a telephone conversation with the White House that this was the President's wish, he acquiesced. Frank McHale and other McNutt supporters who had been working for years to elevate McNutt to the Presidency stormed. They could not get the Presidency from this convention, but they were confident that the Vice Presidency was within their grasp. They felt that they had better than an even chance to hold their lines, even in the face of the President's request for the nomination of Wallace.

McNUTT WOULD not be budged. He implored them to help him make good his pledge to support Wallace. The Indianans reluctantly accepted his decision, as did various other delegates, but zealous McNutt supporters in Oklahoma, Idaho and scattered through other States, stood their ground.

The ovation which McNutt received when he strode forward to the rostrum, shaking his head firmly after he had been presented by Oklahoma, to withdraw his name and second Wallace, was the heartiest and most spontaneous of the convention. Without the aid of the organ or bands, and in spite of the persistent efforts of Chairman Barkley and McNutt to quiet it, the demonstration went forward under its own enthusiasm. There were some good-sized blocs of loyal Hoosiers in the galleries, but not enough to account for the great wave of cheers with which it seemed that most of the 30,000 people in the stadium tried to prevent McNutt from making his renunciation.

McNutt proved that he had popular appeal. He has also a corps of devoted followers in the party organization scattered throughout the country. The convention stamped him as a national figure and a power to be reckoned with. Without him, Wallace probably could not have been nominated, even by the highest pressure the White House could generate.

FARLEY WAS a more familiar figure, beloved as few politicians are. For the gradual and poignant disintegration of the alliance of Roosevelt and Farley, both of the principals bear a measure of responsibility. Strongly held differences concerning the future character and program of the Democratic Party helped to pull them apart. But hurt feelings were to blame, also.

Farley has borne himself always with dignity and with a smile on his face. The convention ratified the party's opinion of him with numerous ovations. And the record will show to the end he acted with greater generosity than some of the New Deal lieutenants who led the fight against him and for the renomination of the President.

But is it "the end" for Farley? He has consented to continue as national chairman until August 17. Perhaps then he will agree to serve until the end of the campaign. The pressure on him to do so will mount.

By a strange irony the two men whose sportsmanship won the highest acclaim of the convention have themselves been political enemies. At least, Farley has never concealed his hostility to McNutt—although McNutt denies that he feels or has felt any ill will toward Farley. And most ironic was the fact that the origin of Farley's distaste for McNutt was the latter's refusal to deliver his Indiana delegates to Franklin D. Roosevelt at Chicago in 1932.

In 1940 the roles were reversed. Farley was a leader of the opposition to the third term—although when the choice had been made he moved quickly and gallantly to heal the breach. McNutt, foregoing a prize which was almost within his grasp, saved the night for Roosevelt.

As Washington Battled 96-Degree Heat

SUN BATHING—Washington's pools were taxed to capacity yesterday as heat-wilted city dwellers sought relief from tropical temperature. Among the bathers at the East Potomac Park Pool was Edna Kneller, of Arlington Village, Va., snapped as she was absorbing some sunlight

REFRESHMENTS—Dining al fresco 'neath the trees on Hains Point also had its share of advocates yesterday. Alyce Blagman, year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Blagman, of 2217 Minnesota avenue southeast, cools off with watermelon

PICNIC BUS DESTROYED—Thirty-six colored persons on their way to Carr's Beach to cool off escaped uninjured when the Capital Transit bus conveying them caught fire at Davidsonville, Md. The driver was Carl C. Powell. Transit company officials said they had been unable to determine the cause of the fire. Flames can be seen consuming the roof of the bus

Catholic University Students and Teachers Honor Patron Saint With Procession and Mass

1. Viewing the procession at Catholic University in honor of Mary, patron saint of the school and Nation, are (from left) the Rev. Killian Healy, prefect of students; the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and university rector; the Very Rev. Gabriel Pausback, O. Carm., assistant general of the Carmelite Order for English-speaking provinces, and the Rev. Celestine Fitzpatrick, prior of the Carmelite House of Studies. Winding its way . . .

AN inspiring procession of more than 1,000 summer students, teachers and members of religious orders across the sun-bathed Catholic University campus, and solemn high mass in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception yesterday marked the celebration honoring Mary. She is patron saint of that institution and of the country.

Hundreds of robed sisters, some protected from the blazing sun by umbrellas; Carmelites garbed in brown scapulars, Augustinians, Franciscans, Servites and others walked two abreast into the cool of the shrine. Four of the priests carried a statue of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, flowers clustered at its base. Many of the participants recited the rosary as they marched.

IN the rear of the procession came the purple-vested university rector and Bishop of Bilta, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan; the Very Rev. Gabriel Pausback, O. Carm,' assistant general of the Carmelite Order for English-speaking provinces; the Rev. Killian Healy, prefect of students; the Rev. Clestine Fitzpatrick, prior of the Carmelite House of Studies, and the Rev. John J. Jepson, S.S., chaplain of the summer session, who celebrated the mass.

Assembled in the shrine for the mass, the worshipers heard Father Pausback, in a devotional message, emphasize the need for prayer today, especially for the war victims in European lands.

ANNOUNCING the purpose of the occasion several days ago, Bishop Corrigan said:

"The idea is to have the members of the summer session unite on a given day to express their common appreciation of Mary's patronage and to honor her by a collective celebration since she is the patron of the university and of our country."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Film Makers Remember Their 'Forgotten Men'

Many Former Stars Now Visible in 'Bits;' Sylvan Theater Defers to Mr. Stokowski; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE VETERAN FILMGOER finds a double interest in many of the current screen releases. He sees not only the players recently come to eminence, but, if he watches the "crowd scenes" closely, he also is able to detect the presence of many of the stars of the sentimentally termed "good old days," glad to avail themselves of assignments to "bit" or even "extra" parts.

BELL

This was commented upon of a recent Sabbath, in connection with the considerable number of the once great to be seen in obscure parts in "All This and Heaven Too," now in its second week at the Earle Theater. That was only a single instance out of many.

There is Monte Blue, for example, who is remembered for conspicuously meritorious work in such outstanding films as "The Birth of a Nation," "Conquest," "The Song of Songs" and "Tiger Rose." An eagle eye might have discerned him more recently in microscopic parts in "Spawn of the North," "Dodge City," "Juarez" and "Geronimo." Vigilant attention also will detect him in De Mille's forthcoming "Northwest Mounted Police." Then there is Jack Mulhall, once at the top of the heap among the younger matinee idols, who, with Dorothy Mackaill, formed one of the most popular "teams" of the silent flickers. You probably never even noticed him in "One Hundred Men and a Girl" and "First Love."

Wade Boteler, Inez Courtney, Aileen Pringle and Herbert Rawlinson are others stars of an earlier era, now content to "get in there" in any sort of role offered them. If the list had to be continued, it could be made to include Raymond Hatton, Roscoe Ates, who seemingly now has forgotten how to stutter; Marie Prevost, Mae Marsh, Taylor Holmes, Alice White and a host of others.

Alice White's name, in the mind of the old-timer, is indelibly linked with that of the late Milton Sills. It was with him in "The Sea Tiger" that First National promoted her from script girl to actress, 'way back yonder in 1927. It will be recalled by those whose memories stretch back that far, that one of Sills' biggest hits was in the title role of "The Sea Hawk." By some odd coincidence Errol Flynn is coming along next week in a new picturization of the swashbuckling Sabatini adventure yarn.

Lest these reminiscent ramblings be deemed indicative of nothing more than the mental toll taken by the heat, I may say that they were prompted by the fact that "My Love Came Back," following "All This and Heaven Too" at the Earle, continues the noble work of remembering the forgotten man. Appearing in its cast are ten once famous stars or leading men of the screen, now cast as "dress extras." They are Wyndham Standing, Stuart Holmes, Henry J. Herbert, Creighton Hale, Ed Mortimer, Frank Mayo, Erie Mayne, Al Lloyd, Sidney Bracy and Sidney de Gray. That's two in a row for Creighton Hale. He is also the momentary ship's petty officer in "All This, etc."

Not much has been said about it, but Carter Barron put in one of the most strenuous weeks of his life at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago. Appointed an assistant secretary to Party Secretary Chip Robert, Loew's Eastern Division manager was in charge of the entertainment features of the Windy City conclave. In his headquarters in the Stevens Hotel, he has directed the convention's extra-politico diversion—holding auditions, finding "spots" for his acts and then getting them on. Harry Richman, Phil Regan and Ken Murray were some of the stars he turned up.

Edward Knoblock's "Kismet," performed by the Eckington-Roosevelt Players, will be the summer season's fifth festival attraction at the Sylvan Theater. It will be presented on this Thursday night, July 25, instead of tomorrow, to avoid conflict with the Stokowski engagement at the Watergate. "Kismet" will be recalled as one of the outstanding stage successes of Otis Skinner, dean of American actors. He also appeared in the screen version of the "Arabian Nights" spectacular drama with equal success. It should fit well into the Sylvan setting, what with its Oriental costumes and all.

There are some pretty good guessers in our midst—notably S. Kasten, 485 M street southwest, and Miss Eleanor H. Mott, 608 Tuckerman street northwest, who won that "guess the attendance at 'Andy Hardy Meets Debutante'" contest, sponsored by the Palace Theater and the Ross Jewelry Co. Mr. Kasten guessed within 76 of the actual attendance and Miss Mott led the women's division by coming within 604 of the total count. Both will receive free trips to New York and the World's Fair. What was that total count, anyhow?

Wide Variety Makes Up Bill At Trans-Lux

News Shots, Sports And Short Subjects Cover World Field

Thrilling scenes at the Stadium in Chicago as the Democratic Convention nominates President Roosevelt, are tops at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. Out in Colorado, where the Republican nominee, Wendell L. Willkie, is vacationing, we find him being hailed by thousands at an old-fashioned fish fry.

The war news for the current week shifts to the Far East as Great Britain agrees to close the Burma road at the "request" of the Japanese. What was perhaps the last snake-like line of trucks, carrying Chinese supplies, is vividly pictured as it winds over this road, made famous by Kipling in his "Road to Mandalay." You will take an upright posture in your seat as hundreds of flying cadets of Chiang Kai-shek's new army march toward the camera and then to their waiting planes. The ground army also boasts thousands of cadets trained to excellent military precision. At the same time, in Tokyo, Japanese Emperor Hirohito greets the puppet monarch from Manchukuo.

General News and Sports

The much talked about "mosquito" boats for the Navy are tested here in Washington. Hundreds rush to headquarters in New York City to apply for war refugee children. The steamship Washington is shown arriving in New York with her last passenger list for the duration of the war. Other interesting shots in the news section include the world's largest uncut diamond, arriving in New York by parcel post; the Cuban election and the fighting of forest fires in Montana by the Forest Service parachute corps.

Sports events take in the all-star Red Cross polo game at Westbury, the juvenile water circus at Astoria, the log-rolling contest at Longview, and the annual world-famous Goshen trotting races, with all the "David Harums" on hand.

The short subjects include a travelogue to the Tyrolean Alps and a novel picture presentation, "Odd Vocations." This subject includes a visit to Charley Gay's school for training lion cubs, and also introduces Hollywood favorites indulging in various hobbies. For comedy there is a new "Our Gang," entitled the "New Pupil." "Swing Social" is the cartoon, and it is one of the best to be seen at the Trans-Lux in many weeks.

Roland Drew Back At Former Studio

Making a screen comeback, Roland Drew, former Paramount school "find," returned to his home lot recently to portray a German submarine officer in "Mystery Sea-Raider."

Cast in his first role at Paramount since he left the famed school from which Charles "Buddy" Rogers also "graduated" in 1927, Drew supports Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon and Onslow Stevens in the topical film based on events in the current war.

Anniversary

Exactly a year from the day they played their first scene in "Babes in Arms," Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland went before the cameras in "Strike Up the Band" with the same director, Busby Berkeley.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 21.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Maurice Maeterlinck, who arrived from Europe last week, revealed the warning, delivered in Lisbon, that the Germans would sink any vessel on which he was a passenger—because of his anti-Nazi writings.

Countess Potocki, wife of the Polish Ambassador to America, was scheduled to sail on the same ship. But when she learned of this warning, she canceled her passage, and arranged to fly here, via clipper.

Maeterlinck was told of Countess Potocki's action, but refused to alter his plans . . . "Now that she's off the boat," explained the venerable playwright, "I'm sure the Nazis won't waste a torpedo on me."

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Maeterlinck dined at the home of Louis Nizer, the attorney, and asked his host about American sports. "Well, I play tennis and golf," Nizer began. "Golf," the playwright shrugged, "following a little ball until it rolls into a hole. Golf is a sport for people without imagination."

He also told us of his visit to the Hayden Planetarium—where a guide pointed a searchlight at the synthetic moon and stars. "They told me these stars and moon cost a few million dollars," said Maeterlinck, "but why should I look at them, when I can step outside into the air and see the originals—which cost nothing."

REALTY DEPARTMENT: Frank Sullivan, Saratoga's favorite son, feels that Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt should have leased a more elegant house for the racing season there. That's why, last week, Sullivan had signs painted and after midnight, unnoticed, placed them in front of his own house and the houses of his friends. Those signs read: "Before You Condemn My House—Take a Look at Vanderbilt's."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT—Yip Harburg, who wrote the lyrics for the new Al Jolson show, expressed disagreement concerning some of the lines. "I'm the one who'll decide," said Jolson. "I've got $100,000 of my own money invested in this show."

When Al kept repeating this statement, Harburg still protested, and reminded, "My Hollywood salary is $1,500 a week—and I've put many weeks of work into this show. I have a large stake in it, too" . . . "You're talking like a Red," Jolson declared. . . . "No," Harburg clarified, "I'm talking like a capitalist."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Harold Rome, who rewrote the lyrics of his "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones" for use at the convention and the Democratic campaign, was advised that two of his new lines in that song have been censored by the committee officials . . . Those lines were "He does not run a utility . . . No, siree, he looks out for the whole country.

LOCAL NEWS—Enough footage was saved from the two Wendell Willkie "Information, Please," movie shorts to make a third film which will be released after the election . . . Mrs. Lionel Stander is at Mount Sinai Hospital, after an operation . . . Elissa Landi has been signed to play in the dramatization of "Young Man With a Horn."

Sabin Carr, Yale's record-holding pole-vaulter, has entered the theatrical field. He is the new associate producer at the New England playhouse in Ridgefield, Conn. . . . Abe Attell, the ex-fistic champ, is purchasing a restaurant at B'way & Fifty-second street. . . . As a publicity tie-up with the new movie, "Brigham Young," the Dancing Teachers Association will introduce "The Brigham Young Glide," in which one man dances with several women.

BOOK DEPARTMENT: A young, pleasant detective went Thursday to the home of Jay Allen, the war correspondent, to question him about the bombing at the World's Fair. Allen's name was on the list of those to be questioned because of his work in behalf of Loyalist Spain . . . "I assure you I never did any bombing," Allen told him. "And if you're going to question all persons who supported Loyalist Spain, start with Stimson and Knox."

Allen then introduced the detective to his guest, Edmond Taylor, the reporter who just returned from Europe and author of "The Strategy of Terror" . . . "If you want to know how witnesses are questioned under a Fascist regime," Taylor stated, "then listen"—and related incidents which appear in his book . . . The detective thanked him and left, promising to stop at the first shop and buy the book.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, July 21.

Quite a sight seeing Shirley Temple visiting Deanna Durbin on the "Spring Parade" set, later to be joined by newcomer Gloria Jean. Rather a remarkable display of million-dollar babies, wouldn't you say? When Mr. Zanuck took over the Fox studio, he had two star assets, Shirley Temple and Will Rogers. It's to his undying credit that when Rogers passed away, Zanuck mourned him as a friend, and not as an asset. Shirley built up a fortune, but her passing from his management will not be mourned by him until she makes a picture for another company and again becomes queen of the boxoffice.

HOPPER

History certainly repeats itself in this business. It keeps on repeating from cradle to the grave, if you've got what it takes. You all know that Deanna, when her option wasn't taken up at Metro, saved the Universal Film Co. She's had seven straight hits—you count 'em. So the studio is shooting the works on "Spring Parade." It has all the charm of the old world, not a cough in a carload, or a tear drop in the Danube, or in the tiergarten, where they do the old Vienna waltzes in the old Vienna manner.

And Deanna's so happy that she thought up a . . . me called "Stinky Pinky." You think of a phrase like "Cheating on the beams of your house" and your victim has to give a simile in rhyme, such as "Rafter Grafter." A "Red South American" becomes a "Vermilion Chilean." "Bogged down in a mudhole" is "tire mire." After playing the game with Shirley, Deanna asked her what she had for breakfast. The Temple replied, "Ghost toasties, evaporated milk, with the hole of a doughnut—and my guest was the little man who wasn't there."

You would have thought Roz Russell, after stealing "The Women," would be given Metro's plums, wouldn't you? But that ain't the way we do things here. She hasn't worked on her home lot since. Sure, she's done "My Girl Friday," "No Time for Comedy" and "Hired Wife." I guess she's lucky, because they wouldn't have given her opportunities like that at her studio. Don't ask me why—I wouldn't be knowing. It's just little mysteries like this that keep you intrigued with the picture business.

Today two grown-up refugees arrive in Hollywood—Lady Mendl, who'll put up at Pickfair, and Lady Castleross will be entertained by Paulette and Charlie Chaplin. Paulette has already arranged to take three refugee children, has placed four more, and says when the 50 English children arrive from the Actors' Orphanage, she has an idea—which probably won't be followed. She thinks that 50 of our children should be put in the home with them, and they should be trained together. They could learn so much fr . . .

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 21 (INS).—A little scouting reveals that Phil Berg has just sold Paramount "The Captain From Connecticut," by C. S. Forrester. Remember Forrester is the author of the much publicized "Captain Hornblower" series which are to be filmed by Warner. Para grabbed the latest Hornblower novel from the galley proofs and 'tis said the price paid is in the neighborhood, of $50,000. Not bad for an unpublished work.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

"The Captain From Connecticut" is laid in 1812 in Martinique, the island so much in th news now, and the leading characters are two sea captains—one American and the other British. The American falls in love with the governor's daughter while the the Britisher pays court to His Excellency's sister. Y. Frank Freeman can only see Gary Cooper as the Yankee Doodle boy and Charlie Laughton as Johnny Bull. Whether or no Y. Frank gets these two popular movie favorites is another question. But you can't be shot for trying.

Seems to me the femme contingent of the country have suddenly become Walter Pidgeon conscious. I can remember when Walter was just another actor, or leading man if you will, but now the mail is filled with leters from gals who ask for some news of him. So today I got on my horse and rode out to Metro and asked "what about Watler?" Here's the news: Walter will have the second male lead in "White Command." Bob Taylor, another handsome male, who within the year has built himself a following, has the lead. Irving Asher is the producer and Frank Borzage will direct.

At least a year ago casting rumors were hot on "Mother Ravioli," At Warner Brothers. Fay Bainter, Judith Anderson and Gale Sondergaard were a few of the names discussed, but in some way all plans fell through and I had supposed the picture was postponed indefinitely. Today they told me at Warner Brothers that under the title "East of the River" this picture, rewritten, will go into production in two weeks with Marjorie Rambeau as the mother, who figures importantly. The two brothers will be played by John Garfield and William Lundigan. Marjorie ("Tug Boat Annie") must be good, for as soon as it was previewed she was handed "Mother Ravioli."

The chief topic of conversation today was Warner's willingness to release Paul Muni, one of their top stars, and William Dieterle, one of their ace directors. What does it mean? Are salaries going to be lowered and options not taken up? This is the third instance on the Warner Lot. Pat O'Brien and Warners parted company—of course only temporarily. Shirley Temple's option was not taken up. Whether or not this means that the talen in the top brackets will be challenged when option time comes around, nobody knows. I am inclined personally to think that neither Muni nor Dieterle need worry for they will probably have all they can do at the other studios. That also goes for many of the other favorites and directors.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mrs. Don Ameche goes to St. Vincent's Hospital over the week-end to have her baby—her fourth. A caesarean operation will be performed; Gale Storm, RKO actress from Houston, Tex., has said yes to Terry Belmont, also an actor at RKO; Dolores Del Rio's friends are sympathizing with her on the passing of her father J. L. Asunselo, who died of heart attack Friday morning.

Marie Wilson, who flew to Washington last week, was at the Gertrude Lawrence opening with her perennial Romeo, Nick Grinde; just about all the English colony were there and many of Gertie's friends; Elsa Maxwell entertained the Douglas Fairbanks, jrs., Reginald Gardner and Dickie Gordon, both at the opening and later at Ciro's. Interesting to see Gertrude Lawrence, who was once Doug jr.'s heart throb, chatting with pretty Mrs. Doug jr., all eyes in the room were turned to that table. Doug brought Mary Pickford who was with Gwynne and Bud Ernst, over to meet Miss Lawrence; Gracie Fields and her bridegroom, Monty Banks,

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

'Private Picnic' Lures 85 to Rock Creek Park

Several Debutantes Among Those Who Attend; Betty Drayton, Letitia Knox, Robert McBride Are Hosts

Motorists passing through Rock Creek Park near the Chevy Chase Club yesterday afternoon must have thought that big gathering picnicking there was a convention. There were almost 100 in the gay group, but it was a private picnic—gotten up by a trio of young people.

The enterprising hosts—the Misses Betty Drayton and Letitia Knox and Robert McBride—had the idea last week of giving a small picnic, under the impression that the town was somewhat deserted this week-end. But when plans were completed, over 85 members of the younger set had been found to be still here and eager for some fun.

Hot Weather Is All But Forgotten

The picnic was a "bring something" party, and everybody arrived laden with bottles of beer, soft drinks, cold ham, or platters of salad and sandwiches. Those who didn't know the way to the grounds met at the Drayton home first, and from there a caravan of cars started out a little after 4.

The hosts had carefully picked a wooded site with a little brook, so the hot weather was almost forgotten. The more energetic played baseball before supper, while others took off their shoes and waded in the stream.

Among the guests were several of the season's debs, including the Misses Patricia Prochnik, Barbara Beale, Patricia Morris, Nancy Weller, Lucy Clagett and Joan McKenna.

From Middleburg and Leesburg came a number of young people. Others present included Miss Julie Dulaney, Philip Evans, Miss Anne Turner, Thomas Turner, Miss Bella Hagner, Miss Jacqueline Meredith, Hal Clagett, John Breckinridge, Tinsley Adams and James Jones.

Miss Drayton Goes To Cooler Clime Soon

Miss Drayton, who was presented to society last summer, will leave shortly for a house party in Pittsburgh. Early in August she will go to Saranac, N. Y., with her parents, the Charles Draytons. She recently had as her house guest for several weeks her cousin, Miss Sara Hastie, who is now back at her home in Charleston, S. C.

Picnics are the chief diversion these days for young folks who are staying in Washington. They are looking forward to that being given next Saturday by Miss Ruth Hurley, sub-debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, who will entertain at her parents' home near Leesburg.

Gen. Brainard Writes of Arctic

In the midst of the hot spell, it is rather refreshing to think of a book which deals exclusively with the Arctic. Such a work has been recently completed by Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard, U. S. A., retired, who, with Mrs. Brainard, lives at the Shoreham. Both are well known in social circles here, and have many friends who are looking forward to the book's appearance in August.

It was in 1881 that a party of 22 white men and 2 Eskimos began an expedition in the Arctic. On June 22, 1884, 6 of the 22 men were rescued after a harrowing winter.

During those three years young Sergt. Brainard kept a day-by-day record of the adventures of himself and his 23 companions. History knows all about it as the Greeley Expedition, and students of history and adventurous-minded youths have read about it for more than 50 years. Gen. Brainard, himself, wrote a first book on it in 1929 called "The Outpost of the Lost."

He was the real hero of the expedition, but he would never tell you about it. Mrs. Brainard had to slip in this information when he wasn't listening.

Sergt. Brainard and Lieut. James B. Lockwood made an expedition into the North farther than anyone had been for 300 years. They reached within 400 miles of the Pole, discovered years later by Perry.

The expedition was a success, but then came a winter of starvation. The dwindling party of men lived in a snow house built with their inverted boat for a roof. They began cutting their food rations from the necessary 3 pounds a day to 8 ounces a day. They diced the sealskin from their sleeping bags and ate that. When that was gone they cooked their sealskin cloths. But, as the general said: "We never wanted for variety. We had boiled sealskin and roasted sealskin."

When spring came they killed a few foxes and a bear, and the general fashioned a net to catch some small shrimp which he discovered in the lake by their camp. The shrimp were much the same as the shrimp Washingtonians eat.

On June 21, 1884, young Sergt. Brainard, too weak from starvation to stand, made a last entry in his book of notes. On June 22, Commodore Winfield S. Schley, leading a relief expedition, rescued the six survivors of the party. Another 24 hours and it would have been too late.

Now, at 83, Gen. and Mrs. Brainard live quietly in an apartment at the Shoreham. The walls are lined with paintings of the Arctic expedition and with photographs of Perry, the late Maj. Gen. Greeley and other Arctic explorers. Gen. Brainard is the last of the six who came back.

In a drawer in his study, the general has the original notes made on the trip, and the telescope which traveled the farthest north with him. A pistol from the adventures is in the Smithsonian Institution, and a huge panel of the trip to the farthest north for a long time decorated the walls of the Capitol.

Nancy Barr Becomes Bride

After a honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phelps Saunders will make their home in New York. The couple were married on Saturday evening at 8 in the Grace Church, Cismont, Va.

The bride, the former Miss Nancy Barr, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kerr Barr, of Ridgefield, Stony Point road, Charlottesville. Mr. Saunders is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nelson Saunders, of Washington. The Rev. Leslie Robinson officiated at their wedding.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white net made with brief puffed sleeves. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

Miss Lu Chester, of New York, was maid of honor, attired in pale gray chiffon with short puffed sleeves and carrying talisman roses. The bridesmaids were the Misses Allen Culp, of Huntington, W. Va.; Anne Dean, of Asheville, N. C.; Mary Elizabeth Neff, Mary Miller Wheat, Rosemary Rinehart and Sue Bolling, of Charlottesville. Their gowns were similar to that worn by Miss Chester and they carried ivy and yellow gladioli.

Miss Jane Barr, sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Jane Derby were junior bridesmaids. The former dressed in yellow net and the latter in green. Their flowers were old-fashioned nosegays.

Anson Hyde, of Washington, was best man. The ushers were William Barr, brother of the bride; Anthony Derby, of New York; Breckinridge Goodloe, of Staunton, Va., and Laidler Mackall, Buell O'Connor and Lewis Ulman, of Washington.

A reception at the Barr home followed.

Julian Joyces To Live in District

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Joyce, who were married June 30 at a candlelight ceremony at the First Baptist Church, are making their home in Washington. The bridegroom, a graduate of Denver University, is studying for an advanced degree.

Mrs. Joyce is the former Miss Elizabeth Easter. She was given in marriage by Clarke Paulson, and wore a wedding gown made with a fitted bodice, long sleeves, full skirt and short train. Her fingertip veil fell from a pearl coronet and she carried a bouquet of white carnations, baby's breath and blue delphinium.

Mrs. Hiram Lawrence was maid of honor and Mr. Lawrence served as best man. The ushers were Paul Coe and James Somnes.

Committee Meets With Mrs. Cavanagh

Mrs. Adelaide Royer Cavanagh entertained recently at a buffet supper at her home on Cortland place for members of the committee who are making arrangements for the banquet to be held August 19 at the Mayflower Hotel in connection with the convention of the International Federation of Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae which will be held in this city August 16 to August 20, with headquarters at Trinity College.

Among the speakers at the banquet will be the Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the Catholic Univeristy of America, and Edward M. Curran, United States district attorney. Miss Margaret Creager, of Washington, will be toastmistress.

Among those present at the supper were Miss Mary Agnes Quinn, second vice president of the federation; Mrs. James F. Hartnett, general chairman of the convention; Miss Margaret Creager, Miss Elizabeth Healy, Miss Mary McDonnell, Miss Margaret Barrett, Mrs. Mary Coffey, Miss Dorothy Parkhill, Miss Helen Fennell, Mrs. Joseph Mulroe, Miss Alice Brick, Mrs. James G. Haskell, Mrs. Andrew Morris, Miss Elizabeth Callahan, Miss Nellie Becker, Mrs. Hattie Brady McGuirl, Miss Alice Foley, Miss Hortense McGowan, Miss Mary Rover and Miss Katherine Rover.

Mrs. Cavanagh was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Einar Philip Flint.

Ellen Dawson's Troth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Dawson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ellen Una Dawson, to Joseph Levelle Dean, son of Mr. nad Mrs. Walter Dean. The wedding will take place in September.

Miss Dawson was graduated from Notre Dame Academy. Mr. Dean, who is an alumnus of Eastern High School, is now attending National University of Law.

Leaving For Cape May

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, who with her husband, Dr. Norris, hopes to be off for Cape May, N. J., this week for a brief vacation. Their family, of eight children, will scatter shortly for various vacation points. Miss Laura May Norris is spending the summer at Camp Percy in New Hampshire, where she is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton. Miss Mary Theresa and Miss Marion Norris, who made a double debut this winter, will leave shortly for a whirl in New York. The oldest Norris boy, Leo, jr., has recently returned from a jaunt to Florida

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. AND MRS. Harry Ashby de Butts, of Washington and Virginia, will come here this week to visit his mother, Mrs. Dulany de Butts, at her home, Brookland, near Upperville. Mr. and Mrs. de Butts have sent out invitations to a dance in honor of their daughter, Miss Van Meter de Butts, on Friday evening, July 26, at the Blue Ridge Country Club, Millwood. Hanson Ely, jr., who is now in Maine with his mother, Mrs. Hanson Ely, will arrive in Virginia on Wednesday and give a dinner party at his home, Nordley, near Upperville, on Friday evening before the dance in honor of Miss de Butts. Guests for these two parties include the younger members of society in the hunt country.

THE LENY MANOR Horse and Pony Show is the important sporting event of the week in Virginia, and will be held on the Leny Manor estate of John R. Buchanan, near Warrenton, better known as "Ye Olde Leny Manor Swimming Hole"—on Saturday beginning at 10 a. m.

All riders, officials and judges are 21 years of age or under, and all the young people of the Warrenton neighborhood are working to make this annual event more of a success than ever, as it is given this year for the benefit of the Fauquier County branch of the Red Cross.

Nineteen classes have been arranged for the day and this interesting event put on by the young people will be enjoyed by a large crowd of spectators both young and old. Mrs. William Standley Stokes, of Philadelphia—formerly Miss Polly Buchanan, of Warrenton, started the Leny Manor Horse and Pony Show some years ago with a group of her young friends—to raise money for the hospital in Warrenton, and it has grown to be a very large affair. Mrs. Stokes, jr., is still interested in her "brain child" and since her marriage comes back to Virginia each season and heads the advisory committee of the show, which includes well-known young riders who have outgrown the 21-year age limit. Serving with Mrs. Stokes, who will arrive at Leny Manor this week, are Miss Jane Wilbur, Alex Calvert and Bobby Wallach.

OFFICERS THIS YEAR are Miss Elizabeth Wilbur—a debutante of the season—Miss Jane Calvert, Henry Wallach and Christopher Rodgers. On the entertainment committee are the Misses Betsy Charrington, Virginia Calvert and Sarah Warren.

The program for the show is about evenly divided between horses and ponies, the former to enter the ring in ten classes and ponies in seven classes. There will also be a novel event listed as "Go to Bed Race," rules and conditions of this class to be announced the day of the show.

Mary Norris Wed in Hawaii

Of interest to many Washingtonians is the marriage of Miss Mary Norris and Ensign Newell Foster Varney, United States Navy, which took place on Wednesday, June 26, at the Central Union Chapel in Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii. The Rev. Melvin H. Harter performed the candlelight ceremony in a setting of palms and lilies. Traditional wedding music was played at the console.

Mrs. Varney is the daughter of Capt. Albert Norris, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Norris, of San Diego, Calif. Ensign Varney is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond N. Varney, of Ogunquit, Maine.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Lieut. K. S. Masterson, was gowned in white mousseline de soie fashioned with short sleeves, high neckline, and a bouffant skirt with lace insets. Her fingertip veil was fastened with a white cattleya orchid and she wore strands of pikaki fastened with an orchid corsage.

Mrs. John Christian Isham, former Marion Donahey and the bride's only attendant, wore a gown of pale blue chiffon with a corsage of orchids.

Ensign K. W. Patrick was best man. Ushers were Lieut. G. F. Pittard, Ensign J. M. Bowers, Ensign T. J. Gary, and Ensign R. P. Webber.

Following the ceremony the young couple left the chapel under the traditional arch of crossed swords formed by the ushers.

A wedding reception was held at the home of Ensign and Mrs. John C. Isham. The tiered cake, which was cut by the bride with her husband's sword, was decorated with miniature officer and bride and set in a border of island flowers and fern.

The couple honeymooned in Honolulu, but will return to the mainland shortly. They plan to visit Washington before going to Philadelphia, where Ensign Varney will be stationed.

Mrs. Varney, who arrived in Honolulu on the Lurline the morning of the wedding, is a graduate of George Washington University, where she received her master's degree in geology last year. She is a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority. Ensign Varney attended Heborn Academy at Heborn, Me., and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1938. Until recently he has been attached to the U. S. S. Arizona, which is now in Hawaiian waters.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE HOT WEEK-END saw many Washingtonians on the beach at Rehoboth enjoying the surf and salt breeze. Among those who are considered as belonging to Rehoboth, and who have been very much missed earlier in the season, are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg. The Richbergs spent the week-end as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper at the cottage the Clappers have rented on Park avenue.

Upon their return to Washington the Richbergs will be off for a summer vacation trip to Canada but Mrs. Richberg promises her Rehoboth friends to settle down there next summer for the whole season.

MR. AND MRS. Marquis James—he is the well-known writer and historian — entertained at cocktails for the Richbergs and the Clappers. Delicious canapes, which are a specialty of Mrs. James, and cooling drinks were served on the wide veranda of the James' cottage. Having just one sand dune and a few pines between it and the beach, the cottage was refreshed with sea breezes in spite of the heat.

Dr. Hans Kindler, Washington's beloved orchestra conductor, and Mrs. Kindler were at the Henlopen Hotel for the week-end. Mrs. Kindler had plans to return to their farm at Ellicott City where real, honest-to-goodness farming as well as her painting holds so much fascination for her. Dr. Kindler, however, will remain at the seaside for a longer period.

The Stanley Richardsons and the Turner Catledges had a full quota at the cottage they share on Henlopen avenue. Mrs. Richardson's cousin, "Sandy" Stuart, arrived from Oregon via Chicago and the Democratic Convention. Attractive Katherine Spatz, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Carl Spatz, was also a week-end visitor. Her father is at the moment on special duty in London attached to the United States Embassy, and her mother is visiting in California, and Stanley Richardson and Turner Catledge, the latter straight from the Chicago convention, both joined the family.

MR. AND MRS. Henry Berliner have rented their cottage on Park avenue to the Raymond Clappers and have gone to Maine for the rest of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter have taken a cottage on Park avnue and have staying with them Mrs. Van Devanter's mother, Mrs. George Farling, of Salisbury, Conn.

Mrs. Francis Savage has left her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street and joined the Rehoboth colony.

Mrs. Charles Godwin Moore is visiting the Francis Winslows in Rehoboth. Commander and Mrs. Moore expect to be in Washington next winter where they have so many friends. Mrs. Moore is the former Beatrice McLean.

MR. AND MRS. James Nolan are in Rehoboth at their cottage on Columbia avenue.

The last time that I saw Capt. and Mrs. John Parker Jackson was at the Wheeler-Eustis wedding, when they told me that they would spend the summer at Hot Springs in the house which they own there. Now comes news that the Jacksons have rented their house at Hot Springs and will spend the month of August at Rehoboth.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton are visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Victor Alfaro, at their Bethany Beach cottage.

Visiting between Bethany Beach and Rehoboth Beach has been curtailed lately because the road between the two resorts is closed for repairs, except on Saturday and Sunday.

Sixteen Club In Hostess Role

A group of attractive young members of the Sixteen Club will act as official hostesses at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds, on Thursday evening, when the play "Kismet" will will be presented as the fifth weekly summer festival of the present season, by members of the Eckington-Roosevelt players.

Miss Marie-Gay Owen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Owen, will head the young hostesses. Assisting her in greeting the guests and distributing programs are the Misses Harriet Barton Elise Melton, Alice Phillips, Betty Rowley and Mary Skinker.

Among the special guests of the Summerr Festival Committee that night will be Dr. and Mrs. Ardeshir Irani. Mr. and Mrs. Andre Cattaui, Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Owen, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Christiansen, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Cameron, Mrs. Silas Baker, Miss Louise Michael, Harry Myer and William Ritter.

This week's festival was postponed from Tuesday to Thursday as a courtesy to the sponsors of the concert of the All-American Youth Orchestra at the Watergate on Tuesday.

Red Cross Active In Chevy Chase

Chevy Chase women are giving hours of service daily, except Saturday and Sunday, from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m. to Red Cross work.

The Chevy Chase unit is under the supervision of Mrs. John D. Northrop, chairman, who is also head of the garment production group. Mrs. Ward Derickson is vice chairman of the unit and head of the layette supplies. Miss Clementine Watkins is sectary. She is in charge of knitting with Mrs. E. Jones assisting. Mrs. Leslie C. Davies is directing the making of hospital supplies.

The unit meets two evenings each week, also on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 7 p. m. to 10 p. m. for the convenience of Government workers who cannot attend during the day.

The meeting place is at No. 3 Chevy Chase Circle. Red Cross flags and markers indicate both entrances, on both streets.

The unit makes refugee garments for men, women and boys, also layette supplies, knitted sweaters and socks and crocheted shawls as well as surgical supplies.

There is a need for more sewing machines, either loaned or donated.

Finnish Relief Will Be Directed At McLean House

Permanent operation of the Washington Committee of the American League for Finnish War Orphans will be incorporated tomorrow at the new headquarters of the league at 2020 Massachusetts avenue, the Walsh-McLean house, recently turned over by Mrs. Edward B. McLean for the joint use of the American Red Cross and Finnish relief activities.

Mrs. Emil Hurja, national vice chairman of the league and chairman of the Washington Committee, has announced that $6,500 has already been cabled to the Mannerheim League for Child Welfare in Helsinki. This represents even a larger amount of contributions, because so many of the foster parents of the Finnish war orphans have been pledged to an installment basis, spreading over a period from one to ten years in some cases.

The American "foster parents" who adopt the Finnish war orphans receive photographs of the children and are able to exchange letters with them from time to time. The children are not brought to America.

Among those Washingtonians who have thus far "adopted" Finnish war orphans are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mme. Hjalmar J. Procope, Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Ridgely Hunt, Mrs. Paul Mellon, Mrs. J. M. Helm, David Finley, Miss Alice C. Evans, Coleman Jennings, Miss Emlin Hurd Hill, Miss Alice B. Lyster, Miss E. Nathalie Mathews, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, John Saul, Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery, Miss Anne Christine Moe, Mrs. R. H. Fletcher, Newbold Noyes, Mrs. Ann B. Lammers, Miss Marian Douglas Scott, L. Corrin Strong, the Mary Weddell Class of the Central Presbyterian Church, of which Miss Lorena Dunlap is president; the Intermediate Department of the Covenant First Presbyterian Church, of which J. W. Branersmith is chairman, and the Finnish-American Book Club of Washington have also adopted Finnish war orphans.

As in the activities of the Finnish Relief Fund last winter, every cent contributed to the American League for Finnish War Orphons goes to the children in Finland. The small expenses of the voluntary organization and the office headquarters in the Walsh-McLean house are supported by additional donations apart from the orphans' contributions.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi will leave shortly for a week's vacation trip.

Badminton Gains Favor In District

Women Find It's Splendid Exercise; Cheap Relaxation, Too

By Martha Ellyn.

FIVE YEARS ago if you would ask the average citizen about badminton he would not know if it were a new swimming stroke or something concerning a woman's sewing circle. However, the average Washington woman today takes the game as casually as she does her bridge or tennis, and many men are substituting badminton for golf.

Max Farrington, athletic director, George Washington University, reported that this game which is played on a small grass court with shuttlecocks, over a narrow net, is definitely on the increase in Washington. A few years ago badminton was on the level with such games as shuffleboard, but now it is the fastest growing game in the country, and is second only to softball in popularity. Mr. Farrington says that the game of badminton is included generally in the physical education departments of nearly all secondary and high schools, as well as colleges. After the game swept down from Canada into New England, he says, California picked it up. It was then greatly popularized by Jess Willard who made a movie playing it.

Six Courts Here

Washington has six public badminton courts—one at Fort Bayard Park, two on the Ellipse, one in Rock Creek Park at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest, and two at the Palisades Playground. There are makeshift courts at other places in the city parks and playgrounds, although they are not listed by the Recreation Coordinator's office. As you drive through Washington's residential districts and suburbs you see many courts in back yards. This is because badminton may be set up on the grass, while tennis needs a "skinned" surface. Another reason for its popularity is that it has the admirable qualification of being understandable and attainable by all income groups. It is also a splendid indoor game and may be readily set up in recreation rooms. Indoors there is no annoyance of the wind blowing the bird.

Badminton sets may be had from $1.25 up to $15. Regardless of the cost, results are roughly the same. It's the flick of the wrist that counts, not whether the racquet is inlaid with mother of pearl. The most inexpensive bird can drop just as dead or bounce just as little as a feathered fury bought from a store where salesmen wear cutaway coats. To play the game well takes practice, but it is a game that is fun all the way—even for the beginner.

Splendid Exercise

Miss Ruby F. Neal, director of physical education, Marjorie Webster School, says that women and girls get splendid exercise by playing badminton. An active game of it, she says, will reduce one because of the bending and twisting necessary. The abdomen, arms, shoulders, back and leg muscles all come in for use. One of the requisites, according to Miss Neal, is the coordination of sight and muscles.

Clothes for playing the game should be of the play or sport type, as freedom of movement means playing a better game. Proper shoes, of the low-heel variety or the regular gymnasium type, are necessary so that the player can move with the greatest of agility.

For Exercise—the Badminton Way

Woman With a Kitten

I

"Just put the groceries there on the table. . . . Yes, it is a beautiful day. Say, by the way, have you a kitten at your house? . . . Oh, no! no! I don't want any! It's just that I have a nice little kitten I'd like to get rid of—that is, I mean I'd like to find a nice home for. What? . . . Six! . . . Oh, then, of course you wouldn't want any more. But, say—if you hear of anybody. . . . Yes, you just tell them this is an unusually nice little kitten. . . ."

II

"Oh, good morning. . . . Yes, the gas meter's in the basement—but wait! Say, I was just wondering . . . what I mean is, how would you like a nice little kitten to take home? You see, we have this lovely little kitten—what? . . . Oh, she doesn't! Well, of course I know there are some people—well, anyway, will you tell all your friends that if anyone of them want a nice kitten. . . . All right, thank you."

III

"Good morning. . . . Yes, the buses are pretty far apart. . . . Well, do you live out this way? Yes, it is a lovely part of town. Have you moved into a new place? . . . Well, of course it'll be a lot nicer after you've settled down and made it more homelike. Oh, say, by the way, wouldn't you like a kitten? I have a lovely little—— Oh, you have! . . . An Angora! Oh, I see."

IV

"Say, girls, before we start this hand, do any of you want a kitten? . . . We-l-l, no, it isn't exactly a thoroughbred, but it's mother—well, she's really no ordinary cat. . . . Yes, you see, she just came to our house and we felt sorry for her. . . . Well, we've gotten rid of all—that is, we've found homes for all the kittens but this one, and I'd really be willing to let the mother and the kitten go together. . . . What? . . . Oh, yes, I'm sure it is. Yes, we call it Jo. . . . George said we'd better name it that so we could call it either Joseph or Josephine. . . . Oh, yes, I don't blame you. Yes, I know how it used to be back on the farm. Why, one time we had 27! But, anyway, I'm sure this kitten's going to be Josephine—I mean Joseph.

"Yes, I know, but, after all, alley cats are much smarter than the other kind, and, anyway, this cat isn't an alley cat. . . . No, I'm sure it's father—or anyway it's grandfather—was a Persian. It's an unusually bright little kitten. I wish you could see her—I mean him—play with his tail.

"What about you, Grace? . . . Oh, you have! Not three! . . . Well, Lora, you and Fred would enjoy it. . . . Oh, he won't? . . . Marie? . . . Oh, but if the dog got used to it. . . . Well, anyway, won't you girls sort of inquire around and see if anybody wants a really lovely little kitten? . . .

V

VI

"Oh, say, George, we've gotten rid of the kitten! . . . Yes! . . . Just this afternoon! . . . Why, that little Quentin Nottbright took it! . . . Yes, he was crazy about it and I just put in a little basket—— What? . . . Well, I can't see that it was taking any advantage of him at all. Anyway, he ought to have a kitten to play with, and besides we had to get rid of it. Now, if Junior just doesn't raise too much fuss when he finds out—wait, there's the doorbell. . . . "Oh, how do you do, Quentin? . . . The kitten! . . . You've not brought it back! . . . Your mother? . . . She wouldn't . . . Oh, I see. Well, that's certainly too bad!"

"Well, George, here's the kitten again! Say, the only thing for you to do is to take it down to the office and see if some of the men there—— What? . . . Well, you can at least inquire around, can't you, and see if any of them want it? . . . Yes, you can just tell them that it's an unusually nice little kitten."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Undergraduate Nurse Tells Distress at Unwanted Lovemaking From Doctors and Internes in Hospital Where She Is Training; How Compel Their Respect?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want your help in finding the answer to the problem of a niece of mine—who will graduate soon from nurses' training. She is small and vivacious, moderately good looking and accustomed to a normal social life. I mean, she has always had a satisfacory number of friends her own age—both boys and girls.

Now, it seems she is being "persecuted" by the attentions of a distinguished surgeon in the hospital where she is training, and she thinks her hands are tied so far as protecting herself is concerned. If she took a downright stand (so she feels), it might work to her professional disadvantage. She has written me about it, asking my advice, and I am taking the liberty of quoting some portions of her letter to you.

Here is what she says, in part: "Remember that Dr. Blank I was telling you about? Well, he always seemed to have such affection for me and I thought he liked me because he has no daughter and sort of wanted one. He has two grown sons. Every time he saw me, he would hug me and whisper sweet things in my ear. He always told my head nurses to be real nice to me and his word is law around this hospital. He is The Great Dr. Blank. Really, he is just about the best surgeon we have—and how well he knows it!

"This one particular day, he found me alone in the clinic. So he took me back to one of the rooms, and before I knew what he was doing, he took me in his arms and kissed me until my head whirled. I was never so bewildered in all my life. I fought like a wildcat, trying to get away, but he held me so tightly I couldn't budge. It was the worst feeling I have ever had in my life.

"Well, he finally let me go and I smacked him. Then he repeated the performance, more emphatically than before. I was afraid to scream and I begged to go. He said, "All right, honey. I'll let you go. You'll keep mum about this, you know. I'll see you later.' And he strolled out. After he left I just stood there and cried and called him (out loud, although no one heard me) all the bitter names I could think of. All my dream castles about him just tumbled down. I did have a sort of hero worship of him. To watch him work fascinated me. He is a very good doctor. But first he is a man.

"Now, when he sees me, he acts as though nothing had happened. He always seems so concerned about me and would do just anything for me. No matter where I'm working, he always comes over to see me. Everyone notices it. They think I should do something about it. But I just don't know how to cope with the situation.

"And he isn't the only one. I have an awful time with those old doctors down in the clinic. They're even worse than the internes. They all seem to want to love and pet me, and goodness knows there's nothing sexy about me. Why do they do it? I try to act professional, but it doesn't help any. I even sass them and tell them what I think of them, but they just laugh at me. Sometimes I get so mad I cry. Honestly, I can't stand near one of them without he puts an arm around me. Since the episode with Dr. Blank, I'm afraid to stay in a room alone with any of them.

"One of the social workers said she would have reported Dr. Blank. But she doesn't understand. I'd only be getting myself in trouble. They would probably say I was encouraging him. So please give me some advice on how to make these doctors keep hands off."

There is more in her letter—about having her "late leaves" and "over-nights" taken away until fall (when she graduates), as a result of getting in past the deadline after a recent dance. But this part about the doctors distresses me. What is there to tell her?

WORRIED AUNT.

Woman's Mental Attitude Is First Line of Defense

DEAR W. A.: Your niece lacks dignity—both of feeling and manner. Unstudied dignity has to do with a sense of personal worth and inviolable reserve, and its language is an attitude of respect for others. The person of natural dignity automatically persuades others to his level of behavior (while they are in his company) by the unconscious authority of his emotional control.

The lack of dignity, implicit in this girl's tolerance of "the great Dr. Blank's" preliminary fondling, etc., reached its climax of self-betraying social ineptitude when she slapped and wept and "fought like a wildcat" in that humiliating episode which she had described with such gusto.

Had she been genuinely averse to his initial familiarities, instinct would have supplied her with the feminine technique for gracefully circumventing such approaches. One is bound to conclude (just as She anticipates) that she "encouraged" him. Not, of course, because she was prepared to suffer insult, but because she hoped, either by humoring him or by developing a "personal angle" to their relationship, to secure easy professional preferment.

She needs to be told (1) that courteous impersonality between men and women co-workers is the civilized ideal, which it is woman's business to establish and maintain; (2) that a woman's attitude-of-thought toward men is the alchemy which determines the general tenor of their behavior toward her; and (3) that if the men in her workaday environment treat her in a free-and-easy manner, unquestionably it is because they are responding instinctively to some provocative quality in her thought-content—however much her surface behavior may seem to belie the telepathic communication.

Where she, poor child, in greenhorn conceit, has been toying with the notion that she must be a Circe-in-uniform (that she should be so harrassed in spite of her shrinking-violet and sauce-box protestations)—the men in the case have been appraising her (purely on the basis of her "come-hither" message, unconsciously conveyed) as a fool, or worse.

Her first line of defense must be in her own mind. If she would be impersonally regarded by men, she must be genuinely detached, emotionally, from the rank and file of her masculine confreres. This means that she must see them and think of them in terms of symbols of their profession; not in terms of beaux, or possible lover or possible husband. It means that, during working hours, she must give herself to her work to the extent that she forgets she is a woman;—to the extent that doing her job well is her absorbing consideration.

When this is her attitude-of-thought toward her work and coworkers, her outward and social attitude will be essentially matter-of-fact, even though kind and cordial to the nth degree—and no intelligent man will construe it for other than what it is, nor seek to presume on her friendliness.

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Mrs. Albert M. Wolford, Wife and Mother For 25 Years, Is Seeking Degree at G. U.

MRS. ALBERT M. WOLFORD, 1400 Sixteenth street northwest, probably told the census-taker she is a housewife, but somehow that word is inadequate. She has been pretty busy for the last 25 years rearing children, doing church work (Calvary Baptist) and keeping her hand in at painting. Now two children are married, one leaves for college in the fall, and the fourth is safe in high school, so she is acquiring some education herself.

Mrs. Wolford

All year she's been attending English and art classes at George Washington University as a start toward a B. A. degree. The cost of tuition does not burden her conscience; she does her own housework, and pays G. W. what her husband otherwise would pay a maid.

Misogynists who claim women are incapable of lasting friendships would do well to look in on The Club some Monday at lunchtime. The six members have been meeting for luncheon at one another's homes for 25 years. They've never taken in a new member nor lost an old one. The secret of the group's longevity may be that it has no officers and no rules. Its members: Mrs. Walter W. Burns, Mrs. James M. Doran, Mrs. Lewis C. Freeny, Mrs. W. B. King, Mrs. Willard Ross and Mrs. B. M. Stalcup.

REALTY NOTE—Masculine shouts of "Trot 'em out! Trot 'em out!" aroused the curiosity of an apartment house dweller and attracted her to the stairwell to see what went on. From the conversation she overheard between the man and the manager of the apartment, she gathered that the stranger was a prospective tenant who had been told the management did not allow children. He then asked how many couples qualified for residence in the establishment.

"Do you mean to tell me there are 60 childless couples living here—or anywhere else in the world?" he shouted belligerently. "I want to see these people—every one of them. Trot 'em out! Trot 'em out!"

SOCIETY'S PETS—All is now well in the Emil Hurja's canine community. Three years ago the arrival of Gretel, the daschund, outraged Bobby, the Boston bull. He sulked, lost weight and seemed on the verge of a nervous breakdown. After a rest cure at a dog sanatarium, he came back healthy though still wary of the intruder. But time has brought a sort of toleration. Now he submits gingerly to Gretel's maternal attentions.

Sunday's Left-Over Roast May Be Cast in New Role

A CURTAIN CALL for yesterday's roast may be the best part of the whole performance. Chopped meat surrounding savory dressing in ramekins is dress for the old trouper—listed in the cast of characters as Meat Timbales. These timbales may be made of any cooked meat—ham, beef, pork, turkey or chicken. And excellent table companions are hot stuffed eggs and mushroom gravy.

Or if the masculine part of the family comes home from a fishing trip with a great fish, plan a celery bread dressing to be baked slowly with the fish, and then serve it with lemon sauce and parsley garnish. The recipes for these two suggestions follow:

Meat Timbales

Mix 2 cups chopped cooked meat with 1 egg and salt and pepper. Line well-greased ramekins with this mixture, leaving the center for dressing. Mix the dressing as follows: To 1½ cups bread crumbs, add 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup melted fat and 3 tablespoons hot water. Press the mixture into the center of the cups. Bake about 30 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Makes six servings.

Baked Fish With Lemon Celery Dressing

Combine 6 cups bread cubes, 1 cup chopped celery, ⅛ cup chopped green pepper, ⅓ cup chopped stuffed olives, 1 tablespoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablesoons lemon juice, 1 cup hot water and ⅓ cup melted shortening and place in a well-greased shallow baking dish. Place 1½ to 2 pounds halibut or salmon steak on top, brush with melted butter, and sprinkle with salt and paprika. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 1½ hours. Yield: 4 to 6 servings. Make a sauce just before serving time, by adding 2 tablespoons lemon juice to 2 beaten egg yolks, and heat into 1½ cups medium white sauce.

Rosalind Russell Rushes Season

Hollywood, Calif. — Rosalind Russell is rushing the season with two smart new fall hats that completely belie the masculine hope that "hats will be saner."

A black velvet cloque tipped well over the brows has a peaked crown, carrying two light blue ostrich feathers (not plumes), and a little nose veil dotted with bits of blue ostrich plume. Rosalind likes this chapeau after 6 p. m. with her black faille suit.

Another is a postillion in cherry red wool with infinitesimal brim and a tall crown that leans off side in slight suggestion of the Tower of Pisa.

Orry-Kelly, who created Rosalind's wardrobe for "No Time for Comedy," says the star is one of the few women who can make an insane hat look completely sane.

Catholic Guild Heads Address Park Meetings

Series of Programs, Opening Tonight, Will Be Held in Manassas

Lay and clerical leaders of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild yesterday addressed large crowds at meetings in Franklin and Public Library Parks.

They will conduct a meeting tonight in Court House Square, Manassas, Va.

America needs to take stock of its spiritual status, Mrs. Linda M. O'Hara, guild vice president and author-educator, said at the afternoon gathering in Public Library Park.

"An American philosopher of a few years back declared that what the country needed was a good 5-cent cigar. The country's need now is something much more profoundly radical," she declared.

Speaking there last night, Thomas D. O'Donnell said: "Our bounden duty consists in the stern necessity which we are under to search diligently those eternal and true principles which must guide us in directing our conscience."

Authority is essential in the world, the Rev. A. J. McDonnell, C. S. P., said at the same meeting, "but the abuse of authority does not disprove its desirability."

"We cannot be indifferent about the Divinity of Christ," Leo A. Foley told the Guild gathering in the evening at Franklin Park, because it "is the fundamental doctrine in our religion and civilization."

The Very Rev. Vincent S. Waters, chancellor of the Diocese of Richmond, will present a lantern-slide lecture on the life of Christ at the meeting tonight at Manassas, one of a week's series of daily programs to be held by the Washington Guild. The meetings continue through Friday.

The Rev. James J. Widmer, pastor of All Saints' Catholic Church in Manassas, who invited the guild to explain to the public the meaning of Catholic doctrine and practice; Miss Helen L. Connolly and Daniel Egan also will participate tonight at 7:30.

Flags to Be Given Gettysburg Court

Gettysburg, Pa., July 21.—A street parade will precede public exercises at a special session of Adams County Court next Friday evening when 50 civic, patriotic and fraternal organizations of the county present a stand of colors for permanent use in the main court room.

After President Judge W. C. Sheely publicly called attention to the absence of the national colors in the courtroom, a community movement was launched by the American Legion and a county-wide representative committee to provide an American flag and a banner bearing the Pennsylvania coat of arms. The ceremonies Friday will be opened and closed by regular court officers.

Allegany Lets Contract For County Home Unit

Cumberland, Md., July 21.—The movement for the abolition of county homes in Maryland is not getting response from the commissioners of Allegany County, who have awarded a contract for the erection of a residence for the superintendent of the Allegany County Home to Sleeman Bros., Frostburg, whose bid was $6,377, the lowest of six submitted.

The superintendent has been occupying rooms on the first floor of the county home and after the completion of the new quarters this space will be used as an infirmary.

Cumberland Honors Veteran Fire Chief

Cumberland, Md., July 21.—A dinner was given last night in honor of Reid C. Hoenica, chief of the Cumberland Fire Department, who celebrated the completion of his thirtieth year with the department as well as his fifty-fifth birthday. Talks were made by Mayor Harry Irvine, Police and Fire Commissioner James Orr and Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health officer. Chief Hoenicka was presented with a purse and other gifts.

Cumberland 40 and 8 Elects Chef de Gare

Cumberland, Md., July 21.—Wesley M. Abrams, former commander of Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, has been elected chef de gare of Voiture 164, La Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux (Forty Men and Eight Horses), the fun-making branch of Fort Cumberland, No. 13, American Legion. The annual convention of the Department of Maryland will be held here August 21-25 and on the last day the officers of the local voiture will be installed.

Sister Celesta Heads Allegany Hospital

Cumberland, Md., July 21.—Sister Celesta, former overseer of St. Margaret's Hospital, Dorchester, Mass., has succeeded Sister Electa as superintendent of Allegany Hospital here. Sister Electa has gone to Saginaw, Mich., to be superintendent of St. Mary's Hospital. The appointments are made by the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, Emmitsburg.

Mrs. Mallon, 87, Mother of D. C. Writer, Dies

Washington Resident Since 1891 Succumbs After Heart Attack

Mrs. Carrie L. Morsman Mallon, 87, mother of Miss Winifred Mallon, Washington correspondent for the New York Times, died early yesterday at her residence, the Woodward Apartments, 2311 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. Mallon, a resident of Washington since 1891, died after a heart attack.

Mrs. Mallon was the widow of Robert Patrick Mallon, who died here in 1912, when the family lived at 431 New Jersey avenue southeast. Her ancestors were among the earliest settlers of Massachusetts. She was a seventh generation descendant of William Woodbury, who came from Wales in 1628, while another forebear, Dean Carlton, was one of eight original members of the Congregational Church in this country.

Mrs. Mallon was a native of North Evans, N. Y. She leaves another daughter, Mrs. Charles D. Oothoudt, Oakland, Calif.

Funeral services will be at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, in the Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol street. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Brainerd D. Wilson To Have Military Burial Tomorrow

Brainerd D. Wilson, former income tax auditor in the Bureau of Internal Revenue until his retirement seven years ago, died yesterday at his home, 1323 Corbin place northeast after an illness of several years. He was 65.

A lieutenant in the Army during the Spanish-American War, he will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery tomorrow after funeral services at 12:45 p. m. at Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast.

A native of South Carolina, he had lived in Washington for 27 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucile H. Wilson; one daughter, Mrs. A. W. Trout, Hyattsville, and a son, Brainerd D. Wilson, jr., of Herndon, Va.

Monticello Willed to U. S. As Farm School

But Laws Then Barred Acceptance of Home Of Thomas Jefferson

Charlottesville, Va., July 21.—Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, would have been a school similar to the Miller Manual Labor School, founded near Batesville by the late Samuel Miller, had the will of Uriah P. Levy been carried out, records in the county clerk's office reveal.

Levy, a captain in the United States Navy, bequeathed Monticello to the people of the United States for the "sole purpose" of establishing and maintaining a farm school for boys. However, at that time (1858) neither the United States nor Virginia was allowed to accept such grants.

State and Federal Constitutions were amended later, but in the meantime the Levy heirs brought suit and set the will aside. The will of Samuel Miller is similar to Levy's.

The Levy will, in part, is as follows:

"I give and devise and bequeath my farm and estate at Monticello in Virginia, formerly belonging to President Thomas Jefferson, together with the rest and residue of my estate, real and personal and mixed not hereby disposed of wherever or however situated, to the people of the United States or such persons as Congress shall appoint to receive it, and especially all my real estate in the City of New York for the sole and only purpose of establishing and maintaining at said farm at Monticello in Virginia an agricultural school for the purpose of educating as practical farmers children of the warrant officers of the U. S. Navy whose fathers are dead.

"Said children are to be educated in a plain way in the ordinary elementary branches to fit them for agricultural life and to be supported entirely by this fund from the age of 12 to 16, and each of them to be brought up to do all the usual work done on a farm, the said farm to be so cultivated by the said boys and their instructors.

"I especially require that no professorships be established in said school or professors employed in the institution. My intention in establishing the school is charity and usefulness and not for the purpose of pomp.

Va. County Sees Good Peach Crop

Winchester, Va., July 21.—Although a number of trees have died as a result of a treatment to eliminate borers, the Frederick County peach crop this year gives promise of being one of the best in history.

The quantity of fruit will not be as great as in past years but, according to Dr. A. B. Grove, of the Winchester Research Laboratory, the quality will be excellent.

The borer treatment, in which ethylene bichloride was used, was unsuccessful when administered last fall, due to the hard winter, but when administered this spring did not harm the trees.

Peaches are maturing about a week later this year than usual and the first crop of Elbertas, earliest to mature, will not be ready for the harvest until about August 20. Other varieties will come in later.

Md. Tobacco Growers To Picnic Thursday

Leonardtown, Md., July 21.—The annual picnic of the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association will be held at Seaside Park, Calvert County, Thursday.

At 2 p. m. a general meeting will be held with Senator Millard Tydings, Representative L. G. Sasscer, Gov. Herbert O'Conor and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, among the speakers.

Prizes will be awarded for samples of the best tobacco grown in each county and a special prize given for the best sample of all the counties.

Delegates Named To Va. 4-H Study

Winchester, Va., July 21.—Delegates to the State 4-H Club Short Course to be held at Blacksburg, Va., starting tomorrow, have been announced.

Those attending will include Denver Heishman, Friendly Grove; Rebecca Lodge, White Hall, both County Council delegates; Ralph Nesselrodt and Esther Richard, Friendly Grove; Hilda Whitacre, Linda Dailey and Robert Dailey, Whitacre Club; Sally Belle Pingley, Mary Gay Marker, Winifred Carper, Clarence Cather, Raymond Carpenter and Nelson Carpenter, Round Hill Club.

Others will be Mrs. Richard Whitacre and Carl Coiner, assistant county agent, leaders, and Hilda Whitacre, Nelson Carpenter, Raymond Carpenter and Clarence Cather, delegates to the All-tar conference.

District Legionnaires To Attend Voiture Fete

Winchester, Va., July 21.—Legionnaires from Winchester, Staunton, Charlottesville, Alexandria, District of Columbia and Maryland are expected at Berryville Wednesday when the first "wreck" of the Shenandoah Valley Voiture No. 1078, will be held at the Community building at 8 o'clock.

The Valley Voiture of the "40 & 8," honorary Legion society, was recently organized. The "wreck" (initiation) is the first staged by the new society.

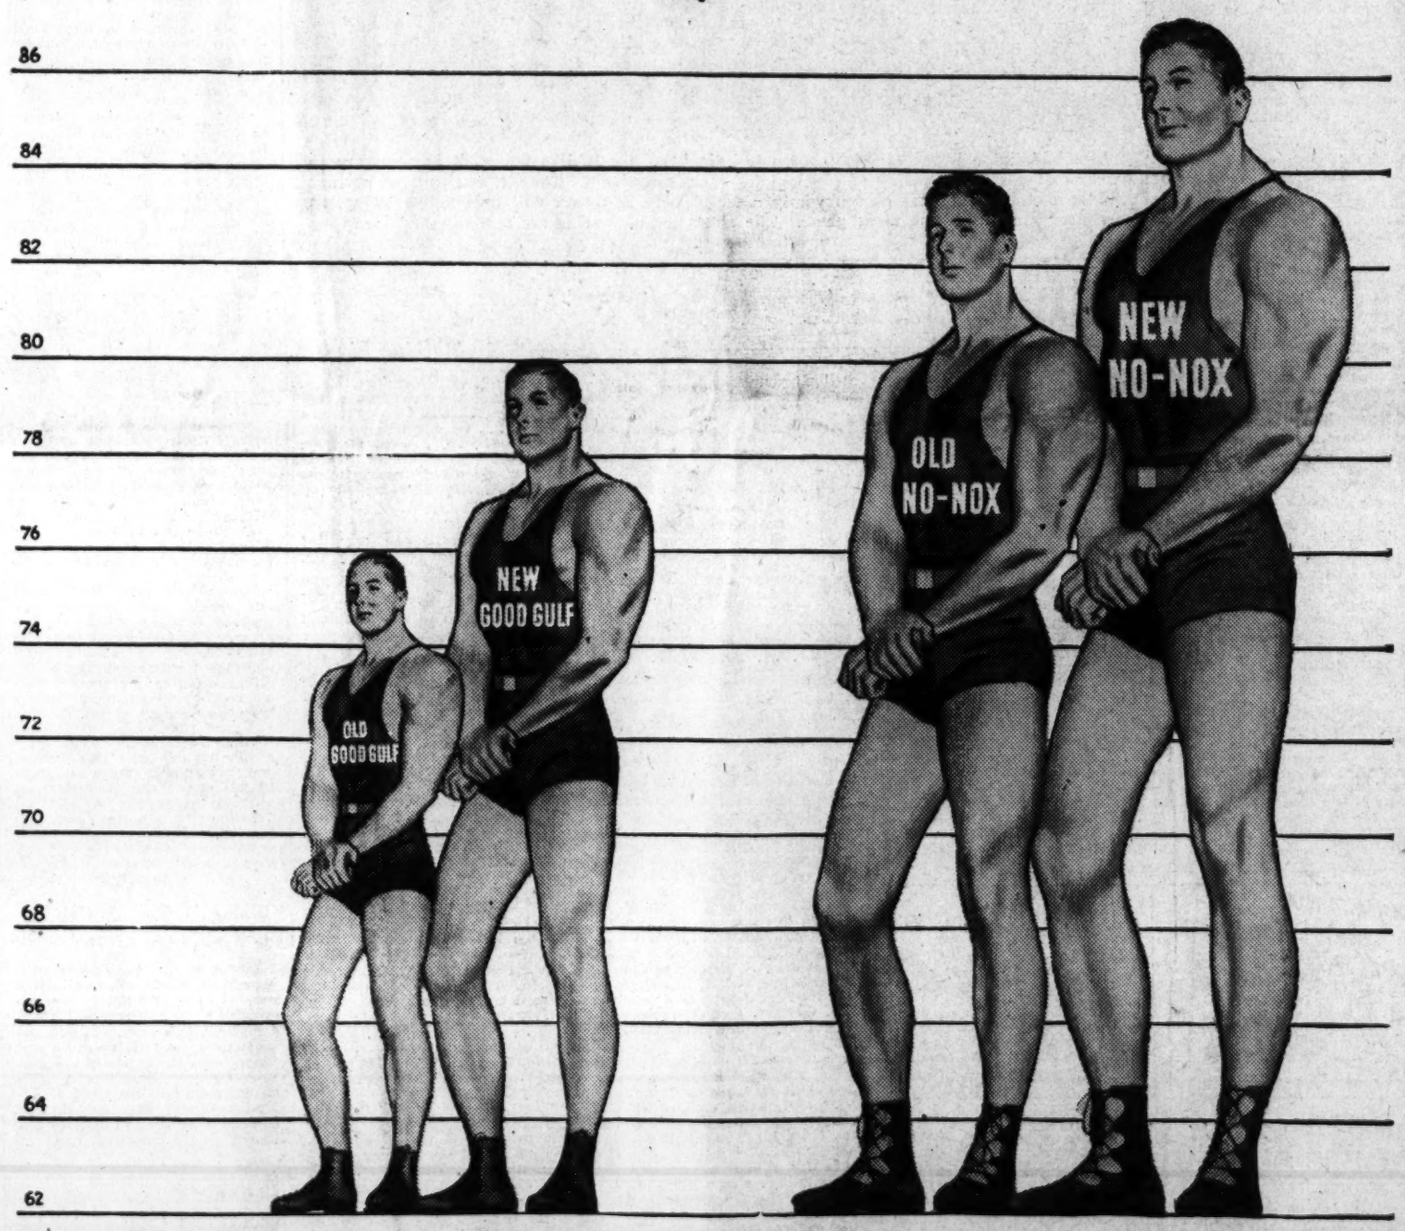
Lieut. O. P. Binns Wins Captaincy

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 21.—Promotion of Lieut. Ottoway P. Binns, commanding officer of Company D, local unit of the West Virginia National Guard, 201st Infantry, to captain was announced here.

At the same time Second Lieut. Walter H. Brown was promoted to first lieutenant and Sergt. Eston J. Whitacre rose from the ranks to second lieutenant.

Platoon Sergt. Garnett L. Brown was promoted to first sergeant by Capt. Binns. He has also been commissioned a second lieutenant in the National Guard of the United States (inactive) which is equivalent to a reserve commission in the Regular Army.

Huge Improvement in Gulf Gasolines



To measure the quality of a gasoline, no hocus-pocus is needed.

There is a scientific test that shows the comparative anti-knock value of any motor fuel.

The shorter figure above represents the former "mark" in that test of GOOD GULF, one of the best regular-priced gasolines in America. But . . . hold your hat! The taller figure shows you the precise improvement in the NEW GOOD GULF, now stepped-up tremendously. What superb performance this power-packed fuel will deliver in your modern, high-compression engine!

But hang on to that hat again as you look at the other figure! It shows how much GULF NO-NOX has been lifted over its old high. And when you consider that the old NO-NOX was knock-proof under all normal driving conditions—that was no easy improvement to make! • • •

Ten Hurt In Traffic Accidents

D.C. AutoVictim Dies, Crashes Here and In Md. Take Toll; 36 Escape Bus Fire

Five persons were injured yesterday in auto accidents here, five others were hurt in a two-car collision at Waldorf, Md., and 36 colored passengers escaped when a Capital Transit bus went up in flames at Davidsville, Md.

Victim of an auto accident on the Baltimore Pike, near Beltsville, Md., June 30, a Washington woman died yesterday in Garfield Hospital. She was Miss Dorothy Parrish, 26, of 441 Klingle street northwest, who was riding in a car driven by Private Edward Richey, of Bolling Field. She was employed by the Welfare and Recreation Association of the Agriculture Department.

5 Hurt Near Waldorf

A collision a quarter mile from the State Police Barracks at Waldorf, Md., injured five. Treated at Casualty Hospital were Mrs. William Bowers, Baltimore, wife of one of the drivers, in serious condition with head injuries; Miss Mabel Kroll, 58, Baltimore, cuts and bruises; Miss Eva Schwartz, 60, Baltimore, head injuries; Barbara Barbee, 7, of 2701 P street northwest, head injuries, and Miss Elizabeth Smith, 52, Arlington, head injuries. Operator of the second auto, according to police, was Archie P. Anderson, of Arlington.

The bus fire at Davidsonville tied up the heavy Sunday traffic for 3 miles as the Galesville Fire Department attempted to extinguish it. Anne Arundel County Police said the driver Carl C. Powell, of 4911 Seventh street northwest, blamed overheated brakes for the fire, but Transit Co. officials said the cause had not yet been determined.

Six-year-old Marjorie Roland, of 1426 S street southeast, was taken to Providence Hospital with severe face lacerations after a collision at First street and Virginia avenue southwest. She was riding in an automobile operated by Edward W. Garrett, 23, of 1426 S street southeast, which crashed with a truck driven by Harold J. Babcock, 31, of Bradenton, Fla.

Colored Girl Injured

Shirley Prue, 4, colored, of 2647 Sheridan road southeast, was struck by an automobile at 2600 Nichols avenue southeast, and was treated at Casualty Hospital for arm injuries. The automobile, police, said, was driven by Edward J. Long, 23, of 807 I street southeast.

Two men were hurt when their automobile rammed into a parked car, according to police, at Chillum road and New Hampshire avenue northeast. The men, Joseph Miller, 21, and Max Miller, 51, of 1033 Sixth street northeast, were treated at Garfield Hospital, for bruises and severe head injuries, respectively.

Rudolph Minor, 46, colored, of 924 R. street northwest, suffered an injury to the left leg when an auto in which he was a passenger, driven by Shirley Fortune, 45, colored, of the same address, collided with another car at Fourth and O streets northwest. Both men were treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Woman Attacked As She Sleeps In Potomac Park

A 53-year-old white woman who left her overheated apartment last night to sleep in West Potomac Park near the Tidal Basin was criminally assaulted by a colored man.

She told Park Police she wakened to find the man, his hand over her mouth, threatening her with a knife. He was about 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighed about 170 pounds, was about 25 years old and wore overalls and a short-sleeved sweater, she said.

Park police rushed her to Emergency Hospital for examination and treatment.

Thomas Folliard Rites Wednesday

Thomas B. Folliard, 43, an employe of the traffic division of the Maritime Commission, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Folliard was born in Washington and spent most of his life here. During the World War he served overseas with the American Expeditionary Force. He was graduated from Georgetown law school in 1926.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Laura G. Folliard, and three brothers, Robert, John and A. T. Folliard, all of Washington. Funeral services will be held Wednesday with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Thief, Who Didn't Mind Heat, Ransacks Home

This is a story which properly belongs in the account of yesterday's heat victims.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Naufal sought to escape the heat of their apartment at 2000 Connecticut avenue at midnight Saturday. They returned at 12:30 a. m. to find the place ransacked, radio, clothing and jewels stolen.

For police yesterday they estimated their loss at $1,000.

Frances Keyes, Writer, To Judge Doll Show

Mrs. France Parkinson Keyes, author, will serve as judge at a doll show to be held at Garfield Playground, Second street and Virginia avenue southeast, at 2 p. m. tomorrow, Evelyn Sheridan, the playground director, announced yesterday.

Music Swelled NO Breeze

Guest Conductor Frank Black Cheered by 6,500 at Sunset Symphony

SWELTERING SYMPHONY—It was hot. It was hot for the audience, musicians and conductor at the Sunset Symphony last night. Harvey Shapiro (left), the guest 'cello soloist, wipes his brow, and some of the audience (center) form in line to refresh themselves at the water fountain. The hottest of all was Frank Black (right), the guest conductor, who made a complete change of clothes during intermission

Director Is Recalled Twice for Encores As Heat-Plagued Capitalites Flock To Outdoor Concert at the Watergate

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Between sunset and moonrise last night, Guest Conductor Frank Black twice reduced himself to damp limpness directing the National Symphony Orchestra in its forty-second Sunset Symphony for 6,500 music lovers who stood in their seats and refused to let him go when it was ended.

Those 6,500 chose what was perhaps the coolest spot in Washington on its second hottest night of the season. But Black, replacing Dr. Hans Kindler on the podium in his first appearance at the Watergate, worked like a blacksmith.

At the intermission he fled to his dressing room off one end of the barge, stripped his dripping garments and replaced them completely.

"This is a magnificent place," he said, ducking into a small anteroom and returning in a fresh suit of underwear. "I've never seen anything like the sunset this afternoon."

He ripped two laundryman's temporary cuff buttons from a dry shirt and heaved them through a window. They landed in the river with two moist plunks.

Praises Orchestra

"The orchestra is excellent," he declared, and pulled a clean collar from its waxed wrapping. "I was most agreeably surprised to find it so good. Conducting it is really a pleasure."

Everything was fine with Conductor Black except his necktie. He fiddled with it while he stepped round a sturdy samson post wrapped with the barge's anchor line. He fitted it to his collar and pulled at it gingerly.

"This tie," he said. "I don't know if I can make it slide. It's so wet."

It slid all right, and Black picked up his baton, a slender, white tapering rod with a cork handle. He pressed the handle, no moisture oozed out, and he nodded, satisfied.

"A fellow in New York makes these," he said. "You just give him one of yours and he makes another exactly like it. I don't know how he does it. I simply used one and whittled on it and got it good and old and it suited me. His new ones seem to work just as well as the old one."

At the other end of the barge, in another little dressing room, Cellist Harvey Shapiro cradled his mellow instrument between his knees and drew the bow across its strings.

Later he was to step into the shell and play Saint-Saens' Concerto for Violincello and his cello was to quiet the crowds on the stadium seats, in the canoes along the seawall, in the cruisers anchored out in Gergetown Channel. Now he played on his cello and answered questions with "yesses" and "noes," not curtly, but with complete abstraction.

With the lingering sunset, which tinted the barge and the river and the concrete stands, the wind died and it became very still along the river. There were those splashes of color everywhere that you associate with Watergate concerts.

Setting of Beauty

There was the soft white light of the shell itself, the spots of riding lights above the anchored cruisers, the bluish lamps along Memorial Bridge, and a tug slid by way out in the stream, gleaming red and white and green like a church on a holiday and the lights of its barges strung out in a long pale wisp behind. Now and then airplanes came low, red and green and white and flaming blue, and their landing lights flickered across the cruisers, the barge, the crowd and th canoes packed tightly alongside the barge, rolling in waves like eddied flotsam to the wash of passing boats.

A fat green moon rose over the Lincoln Memorial just before the concert ended and heads turned to see it, even while hands called Conductor Black again and again to his podium, and finally urged two encores from him. These the orchestra gave, as they did the entire program, with fluid precision.

"That's a good conductor to be so young," said a big park policeman in a hoarse whisper. "He's not any foul ball like so many of those guys. And he's got the boys working."

Bishop Taitt Hopes Hitler To Get Exile

Prelate in Sermon Here Deplores Fuehrer's 'Selfishness, Misdeeds'

The Right Rev. Francis M. Taitt, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania, yesterday deplored the fact that Hitler is using his capacities for organizing and influencing people for selfish purposes.

Guest preacher at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase Circle, the prelate contrasted Jesus' virtuous influence over humanity with the influence for evil of Hitler, Napoleon and other would-be world conquerors.

He expressed the hope that the Fuehrer might be exiled on a desert island, as was Napoleon, where he could repent of his misdeeds, and realize that there is a God in the world.

Bishop Taitt, whose Diocese embraces Philadelphia, Bucks, Montgomery, Chester and Delaware counties, has for several days been the guest of his niece, Mrs. Leon Buckner, of 5439 Forty-second street northwest. He expects to remain until tomorrow.

The prelate's appearance drew a large congregation to All Saints' Church, whose rector, the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, conducted the service.

Takoma Park Rewards Its Librarian

After five years of volunteer service in the Takoma Park, Md., Public Library, Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, 120 Chestnut avenue, will receive her first pay check as librarian, August 1, from the town treasury.

Although she has been acting librarian since the library was organized in 1935, Mrs. Pratt only recently was given the official title of "librarian" when Mayor Oliver W. Youngblood and the town council appropriated $720 a year to be paid at $60 a month.

Devoting all her spare time with an average of 30 hours a week to serving the public and building up the present library, Mrs. Pratt has given 7,800 hours to the work. Before she entered the project, Mrs. Pratt had served as president of the Takoma Park Women's Club for two years. When the latter office terminated she declined all social and club activities to concentrate her endeavors on the library.

With a staff of volunteer workers, Mrs. Pratt spends three afternoons and three evenings a week behind the library counter. She was one of three who started the ball rolling for such an enterprise, through a conversation with Mrs. James A. Robertson, newly elected president of the association, and Col. A. L. Conger, U. S. A., retired. A group of 50 interested persons, whose names today appear on the library's charter, met to organize an association. Mrs. Pratt was elected chairman of the meeting and later president of the organization.

All they had to begin with was a vacant house at 6 Jackson avenue, the property of Col. and Mrs. Conger, who donated the space and a few volumes. The first year was spent in repairing books, gifts from the attics of townfolk.

In less than a year the board of directors saw that the location of the library was not convenient for the public. It was moved to another vacant house, the corner of Ethan Allen and Carroll avenues. By this time the town council appropriated $1,800 a year to cover rent, heat, light, janitor's salary and other expenses.

In two years the darkest days for the association came. Notice was given to vacate within 30 days. The owner of the house had sold the place.

"For awhile," Mrs. Pratt said, "it seemed that all we built up would crash." The board frantically inspected every house, store and building for another new home. Nothing suitable was available for renting. A meeting of the association was called to solve the problem. Before the session closed 17 persons pledged to contribute $900 as the down payment for the headquarters, 8 Sherman avenue. These donors have been named as founders of the library.

Postlude

Frank Black conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday night at the Potomac Watergate: Soloist: Harvey Shapiro, violoncellist. Program: Overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro" (Mozart), Symphony in E minor (Dvorak), Overture to "Prodana Nevesta" (Smetana), Violoncello Concerto No. 1 in A minor (Saint-Saens), "Les Preludes" (Liszt).

Last evening's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra at the Potomac Watergate afforded a large and grateful audience just the kind of relaxation required after the stress of a sweltering day. All the music on the program was so thoroughly familiar that it was unnecessary for anyone to make a mental effort beyond following it along the pleasant path of memory. The auditors were more fortunate than the musicians whose knowledge of the scores did not excuse them from energetic movement in a humid air. Be it said to the credit of the players that they did not relax their standards for a moment nor spare themselves in admirably spirited performances.

BROWN

The novelty of the occasion was not a composition but the conductor, Frank Black, who made his first appearance here on a podium and received a hearty welcome. He was certainly no stranger, for everyone present had heard many concerts conducted by him in the studios of the National Broadcasting Co., but his presence gave several thousand people the opportunity to see him in action and to express in applause their appreciation for past and present enjoyment. There was an indubitable cordiality in the greeting extended to him and in the recalls that brought him back for three extra numbers at the close of the program.

Mr. Black's conductorial manner is authoritative and unmannered and his clear beat has an effective precision. There is not a trace about him of the prima donna batoneer or of the temperamental interpreter with an ambition to extract a different reading from a standard work. His readings have accuracy and clarity, and his guidance is direct and vigorous. Moreover, he shows a sure skill in phrasing that slights none of the emotional values.

He began with Mozart's effervescent overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro," which he led with a sprightly and contagious vim. The brilliant performance was a prelude to the major work of the evening, the E minor symphony which, all program notes to the contrary notwithstanding, is not Dvorak's fifth, but his ninth. Because it was written during the composer's residence in this country and first performed in New York, Americans rightfully regard it as their own, and in their affection for it they overlook the other eight symphonies which are well worth hearing.

After the intermission came another perennially popular overture, that of Smetana's to "Prodana Nevesta" with its irresistible Czech tunes and rhythms. Names become so firmly fixed that it is difficult to change them, but "The Bartered Bride" is a very negligent translation of the original title. The Germans did better with "Die Verkaufte Braut" and the French with "La Fiancee Vendue," for there is no question in the opera of bartering a bride, but of settling a marriage contract.

An estimable young violoncellist, Harvey Shapiro, made his local debut as soloist in Saint-Saens' A minor concerto. He drew a firm and eloquent tone and served it with technical expertness. In the rapid figurations he etched the lines clearly, and there was a glow in the lyric passages. His reading was so enjoyable that the last number on the program, Liszt's "Les Preludes," came as an anticlimax.

Mr. Black acknowledged the recalling applause of the audiences with the "Meditation Religieuse" from Massenet's "Thais," "The Dance of the Tumbling Clowns" from Rimski-Korsakov's "Snegursochka," and his own ingenious orchestration of Jerome Kern's "Old Man River."

Capital News in Brief

D. C. Youth Appointed To Merchant Marine

Reuben Elmore Stivers, 23, of 6309 Connecticut avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., has been appointed by the U. S. Maritime Commission as deck cadet to the S. S. Rafael Semmes, operated by the Waterman Steamship Corporation of Mobile in domestic and foreign trade. He is now on the vessel on a trip to the Orient, relatives said last night.

Stivers, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Stivers, is one of seven cadets from Maryland in training under regulations of the commission. He was one of the 375 successful candidates in January in the national competitive examination prescribed by the commission. Stivers was graduated in 1935 from Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School and attended Emerson Preparatory School for one year.

3 Seized as Thieves Of Phones for Nickels

Police yesterday believed they had captured three men responsible for the theft of money from some 25 telephones, torn from the walls of apartment house corridors since the first of the month.

Arrested were a painter, a clerk and a cook, who were caught red-handed, according to police, after they had torn a telephone from the wall of an apartment house near Seventeenth and P streets northwest.

The apartment house, where the men were seized had been spotted by L. O. Renninger, an agent of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., assigned to tracking down the telephone robbers.

A number of the telephones had been found abandoned in parks after the coins had been taken.

Post Church Editor To Address Club

Robert Tate Allan, religious editor of The Washington Post, will address the Washington Church Press Club tonight at 8 at the Federation of Churches' Building, 1749-51 N street northwest.

Church publicity workers and others interested in raising the standards of religious publicity will attend.

Gunman Escapes In Uptown Chase

An enraged storekeeper and citizens chased a wook-be bandit through early theater crowds on uptown Fourteenth street northwest last night but the man got away by running between houses on Park road.

The man flashed a gun at Harry Piver, his clerk, Leonard Tarnove, 1300 Park road northwest, and two customers in Piver's store at 3329 Fourteenth street at 6:15 p. m.

Standing near the doorway, he ordered the customers and Tarnove to "stand still" and Piver to come forward and open the cash register.

"Open it yourself," retorted Piver, whereupon the gunman thought better of the venture and ran. Piver chased the man down Fourteenth street past the Tivoli Theater, recruiting assitsant pursuers by calling for help.

The gunman turned into Park road and disappeared.

Four Hurt, Three Cars Wrecked, Driver Held in Two Crashes

Boyds, Md., Motorist Locked Up on Four Charges, Although He Couldn't Recall Any Accident, Montgomery Police Say

An automobile accident with storybook complications yesterday left Montgomery County, Md., police with four injured persons, three wrecked automobiles, a motorist and his 4-year-old son on their hands.

It started when Edward B. Byrd, 18, of Dawsonville, Md., halted his automobile on Route 28 at Seneca Creek to join a party of friends in swimming. As Byrd stepped to the roadway, he saw another automobile approaching and stepped to the running board. He was hurled 10 feet when the approaching automobile clipped his own, hurtled across the road and forced a third machine down a steep embankment and into a fence. It continued toward Rockville.

Saw Another Accident

In the third automobile were Lyle W. Paugh and James A. Sims, both of Vindex, Ind. Though cut and bruised, they notified Montgomery County police of the occurrence.

Privates William Crawford and Earl Stearn started toward the scene and, at the Rockville city limit, saw an automobile force another off the road. They stopped it, saw it was considerably damaged and was minus a hubcap and a door. They locked up the driver, Canie B. Steele, of Boyds, Md., who said he didn't remember any accident. With Steele was his son, Canie, jr., 4.

At Seneca Creek, Crawford and Stearn found a hubcap and, a mile nearer Rockville, a door. They proceeded to the office of Dr. Upton D. Nourse, at Dawsonville, where they found Byrd with a deep gash on the hip, a possible hip fracture and a fractured collarbone.

Faces Four Charges

While they were talking with Byrd, another man entered and sought treatment for a fractured arm. He told them he was Michael White, of near Buck Lodge, Md., and had been with Steele but was taken a mile from Seneca Creek before being permitted to alight and seek medical attention. He said a door dropped off with him.

Back at Rockville, police were forced to wait before finally charging Steele with operating an automobile under the influence of intoxicating liquor, failing to stop after a collision, inadequate brakes and failing to stop after a collision with a person or animal. They had to wait for Justice of the Peace Clarke to come and issue a warrant.

Clarke was delayed by a flat tire.

16 Refugees To Vacation At Greenbelt

Sixteen children, 9 to 12 years of age, refugees from war-torn Europe, will begin a two-week vacation today at the Government's model town of Greenbelt, Md.

The youngsters will arrive at Union Station from New York City at 4:30 p. m. Members of the Greenbelt Citizens Association and town officials will furnish transportation to the Government town. Miss Mildred Stadholz, of the National Refugee Service, will accompany the children from New York City.

The refugees will spend the next two weeks in the homes of members of the Greenbelt Citizens Association who have volunteered to act as "foster parents."

The children, representing all religious faiths, are natives of Prussia, Vienna, Nuremburg, Frankfort and Breslau. The fathers of many of the refugees were prominent professional and business men before the war.

One of the children, Walter Kulka, is the son of Dr. Wilhelm Kulka, pathologist. The Kulka family arrived in this country July 3. The refugee contingent also will include William, Henry and Hanna Freydberg, children of an exiled Prussian judge. The Freydberg family spent three months in England and a year in Havana before being admitted to the United States.

Members of the Greenbelt citizens' committee in charge of the refugees are Mrs. Abraham Chasanow, chairman; Rev. Robert Kincheloe, Mrs. Thomas McNamara and Dr. Samuel Berenberg.

500 to Begin Training For Defense

First Classes Start Today at 3 White, 2 Colored Schools In Washington

The first group of 500 men here will start back to school today to study trades vital to the national defense.

By the middle of the week, between 500 and 600 men from WPA rolls and the District Employment Center are expected to be attending 27 classes in three white and two colored District public vocational schools.

A six weeks' course, running from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., five days a week, will end August 31 in time for schools to be prepared for the opening of the regular session. L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, emphasized that the defense program will not conflict in any way with the day school work of regular pupils in the fall. If need be, night classes will be organized then for defense trainees.

The classes starting today will be in McKinley High School, Abbot and Chamoerlain Vocational Schools for white; Armstrong High School and Phelps Vocational School for colored.

For white students there will be two classes each in machine shop, auto shop, woodwork, drafting and blueprint reading; one in welding, mechanical drawing, electric shop, sheet meetal. For colored students, two classes each will be organized in machine shop, electric shop, auto shop, woodwork, drafting and blueprint reading, sheet metal; one each in welding, aircraft, painting.

The program, manned by 27 teachers drawn from the regular faculties of the public schools, will cost $18,067 for salaries and supplies. This fund was provided through the United States Office of Education from a Congressional appropriation.

The trainees from WPA will be paid their usual wages by that agency.

Cantrell said that extension classes to improve skills of men employed in industry would be organized later on if the need for them was established.

Miss Hoyt to Give Show in Quebec

Miss Edith Hoyt, artist, whose home is at 1301 Twenty-first street northwest, will exhibit 75 canvasses and water colors in the gallery of the Pointe au Pic School, Murray Bay, Quebec, today through Friday.

A percentage of sales of the paintings which depict scenes in the province of Quebec will go to the Red Cross war relief fund.

POVICH

At least as Manager Fred Haney, of the Browns views it, the Nats and the A's are his chief concern. "I gave up long ago on the pennant, and I don't have any serious first-division ideas, but I want to take my club to sixth place, at least. That's my goal, and the clubs we have to beat are Washington and Philadelphia."

Haney is still trying to fight his way out of the fog that enveloped what seemed to be the best St. Louis ball club in a dozen years. Less than a month ago they were in fifth place, and thinking about overhauling the fourth-place Yanks. Now they are in the cellar, after recently concluding a 14-game losing streak.

"Talk about being helpless when you're in a skidding car," said Haney, "why, you're in full command of the situation compared to your helplessness with a skidding ball club. There's nothing you can do about bringing a ball club out of a losing streak except pray.

"During that 14-game streak we had some wonderful pitching, but when we had good pitching, we couldn't hit. When we did get runs, our pitching went sour. That's the way it goes with a loser. Everything happens for the worst. Other clubs might turn up their noses at anything less than the pennant or second place. We'll be satisfied with sixth.

ARLINGTON CLASSIC DEPT.—They're spelling it "Bumelech" again since what happened on Saturday when Col. Bradley's overrated colt finished a wheezing third to Sirocco and Gallahadion in the $30,000 race at Chicago. Beaten in the Derby, the Withers, and now at Arlington, Bimelech seems to be something less than Bradley's "best horse I ever owned."

To the students of breeding, Sirocco's 7-length victory over Gallahadion, with Bimelech 3 lengths farther back, was not exactly an upset, despite the 13-to-1 odds the Dixiana colt took to the post. Sire of Sirocco is the stallion Sweep All, which is in the books as finishing second in a Kentucky Derby. But the particular Derby in which Sweep All finished second was the fastest Derby ever run—the 1931 affair, in which Twenty Grand set the record of 2:01 4-5. Sweep All, finishing only a neck behind Twenty Grand, also broke the Derby record in that race.

Vying in turf interest with Sirocco's victory on Saturday was the little Hagerstown track's monstrous daily double payoff of $3,066 for winning two-dollar tickets. Just in case you happen to cash one of these luscious tickets some time, it is well to bear in mind that the payoff is also the business of the Internal Revenue Department.

Under a recent court ruling, Internal Revenue agents are licensed to stand at the mutuel window and witness any large payoff in the interest of Uncle Sam's tax department.

RETURN BOUT DEPARTMENT—The most uncalled-for match that we can think of is the rematch of Henry Armstrong and Lou Jenkins, which Promoter Mike Jacobs has scheduled for October. The same logic calls for a rematch between Italy and Albania. The last Armstrong-Jenkins fight was that close.

If Armstrong didn't satisfy all doubters as to his superiority over Jenkins with his six-round knockout of the Texan the other night, the ringsiders were cock-eyed. If they had permitted it to go one more round, it would have been a case for the coroner, not for the referee.

Armstrong exposed Jenkins pretty thoroughly as an overrated lightweight, who can hit, but can't take it. There were suspicions of that even when Jenkins was beating Lou Ambers. Ambers tapped him lightly with a backhand punch and panic was written all over the features of the Texan. And it began to leak out shortly before the Armstrong fight that Jenkins had been knocked out by at least three lightweight nonentities.

The clamor for an Armstrong-Jenkins rematch is indistinguishable from a profound hush.

SOUR MYSTERY DEPT.—The .286 batting average of Charley Keller is one of the strangest items in the queer American League pennant race. Less than a year ago, Keller was being acclaimed as the best hitter to break into the big leagues since Joe DiMaggio showed up in 1936, but he represents no terrors to pitchers this season.

Keller batted .354 last year in his first season in the big leagues, and nobody was unduly surprised. He came out of the International League tabbed as one of the really fine batters of organized baseball and immediately started panicking big league pitching.

When he pounded out three home runs in the 1939 World Series—two of 'em in the same game—and finished as the leading batter of the series, he seemingly established himself as a threat to lead the league in hitting in 1940. His was apparently the perfect batting stroke—the swing that produced long line drives against the fences and over them. He was supposed to be the hitter without a weakness.

But the league's pitchers have evidently made some discoveries about Keller. In any event, he's 70 points off his 1939 average, and one of the reasons the Yanks aren't out in front of the league at this writing is undoubtedly the woeful batting slump of the Maryland boy.

Grant Star In Exhibition Tennis Here

Atlantan Takes Four Matches; McNeill Trounces Gil Hunt; Mary Hardwick Wins

By Jack Munhall

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, the colorful Atlanta Atom whose prodigious court-covering prompts despairing opponents to believe they're playing against a backboard, completely stole the show yesterday as outstanding national and international tennis stars exhibited on the Rock Creek courts.

Unmindful of the terrific heat and high humidity which was magnified by the glare and the dust rising from the white-hot clay courts, Grant won in four different matches to overshadow Don McNeill, national clay courts champion, Mary Hardwick, England's number two women's player, and Washington's Margo Lee, Gil Hunt, and Barney Welsh.

Though most of a gratifyingly large crowd of 1,000 tennis lovers who sweltered in a 100-degree temperature had been lured to the exhibition by the magic name of McNeill, currently the hottest amateur in the world, they saved most of their infrequent cheering for the good-natured, diminutive Grant.

Grant Improved Steadily

Showing no signs of fatigue and improving steadily as he progressed, Grant polished off ninth-ranking Hunt twice in one-set matches, 6—2, 6—1, whitewashed jittery City of Washington Champion Barney Welsh, 6—0, and then teamed with Miss Hardwick to trounce Miss Lee and Hunt, 6—1, in mixed doubles.

McNeill, though not the star of the day, displayed brilliant form in walloping Hunt, 6—3, in his only appearance. In the fifth match played, Miss Hardwick's superior experience combined with Miss Lee's nervousness and erratic forehand to return her a 6—1 victor.

McNeill, the merciless blond slugger whose forehand and backhand drives form the most powerful two-sided attack in the amateur game today, found Hunt a worthy opponent in the first six games as each broke the other's service once for a 3-3 deadlock. But, opening up in the seventh with power that Hunt could not restrain, the recent winner of the coveted Maryland State and Middle Atlantic States title, swept three consecutive games with ease for his 6-3 decision.

McNeill Overpowers Hunt

McNeill displayed every shot in the books and every type of attack in overpowering Hunt who surprised the gallery by not showing once the pyrotechnics for which he is famed. Don cracked them

Griffs Take Nightcap on Homer; 9,000 Fans Swelter

West's Drive Clinches Monteagudo's Game; St. Louis Home Runs Rout Leonard in 1st

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Little Rene Monteagudo and Sammy West collaborated late in the afternoon to salvage one game for the Nats in the doubleheader proceedings against the Browns yesterday. They lifted Washington to 5-4 victory after the Browns dismayed 9,000 sweltering fans by winning the first game, 8 to 4.

The Nats suffered more than a defeat in that first game. They lost, at least temporarily, the valuable services of Dutch Leonard who was struck on the wrist of his pitching hand by Johnny Berardino's line drive into the box. Leonard suffered a ruptured blood vessel in his wrist and will undergo an X-ray today. The Washington club physician held out strong hope that Leonard's wrist was not fractured.

The customers saw Griffith Stadium's greatest home run spree in several years, with five balls being driven over the high rightfield fence—four of them by the Browns. Sammy West, doubling as a first baseman in the second game, hit Washington's only homer, but it was the blow that enabled Monteagudo to win his game. It occurred with two men on base in the sixth inning at a time when the Nats held a 2-1 lead.

St. Louis all but wiped out Monteagudo's 5-to-1 lead in the seventh, when George McQuinn hit the fifth Brown's homer of the day—his second—with two on base, but the little Cuban tightened cleverly thereafter and gave up only one hit.

Paradoxically, the Nats were outhit, 11 to 6, in that second game. Rookie Bob Harris pitched hitless ball except in the first and sixth innings. Howard Mills, who succeeded him, also held the Nats to no hits.

Outfielder Joe Grace was the big shot of the first game with a mighty extra-base hitting display. He belted a home run in the first inning, hit another in the fifth with a man on base to tie the score at 3 to 3, and later swatted a two-bagger that drove in another run.

In the second inning, the Nats tied the score at 1 to 1 against Elden Auker, who walked Myer and then pitched singles to Jimmy Pofahl and Rick Ferrell. Auker collapsed in the fourth after Ferrell beat out a hit to Berardino and took second on the shortstop's wild throw. Auker walked Case and Lewis singled to right to drive in a run. Walker drew a pass to fill the bases, and Auker forced home a run with a walk to Travis.

Leonard pitched three scoreless innings after the first, but in the fifth he began to show the effects of his injured wrist. Pinch-hitter Cullenbine batted for Auker and singled to right. On successive pitches, Grace and McQuinn drove homers over the rightfield wall, and Leonard was removed. Alex Carrasquel replaced him. The Browns took a 4-3 lead in that inning.

George Case inspired the tying run when he opened the sixth with a triple to left, thanks to his speed on the bases. He scored on Lewis'

Tigers Win Twice; Yank Fans in Riot

Umpire Rue Escapes Injury in Bottle Barrage Protesting Decision on Liner

By the Associated Press

New York, July 21.—In as wild an afternoon as the Yankee Stadium has ever seen, the Detroit Tigers won a double-header from the New York Yankees, 4 to 3 and 3 to 2, today to stay a game and a half ahead of the second-place Cleveland Indians in the tight American League pennant chase.

But all the fireworks were not set off by the Tigers. To Umpire Joe Rue, the target of a howling mob of 68,500 sweltering fans, went the hero's medal. For he called a line smash by Tommy Henrich in the fifth inning of the second game a foul, thereby cutting off two Yankee runs—and it was ten minutes before the crowd quit tossing pop bottles and groceries at him. Rue stood his ground at home plate until Coach Bing Miller, of the Tigers, pushed him out toward the pitcher's box—and comparative safety.

Worst Demonstration

Never in the history of the stadium, old-timers said, has such a demonstration been seen. At least ten bottles whizzed past his head as he stood, arms folded, like the Colossus of Rhodes astride the plate.

It was Pete Fox who supplied the winning blow in that second game, once order was restored, by sending a homer into the right-field stands in the seventh. That gave Schoolboy Rowe his seventh victory of the year for holding the Yanks to six hits in six innings.

The Tigers got 11 off Marius Russo. The first two Tiger runs came on a single by Birdie Tebbetts, a walk to Ralph Kress, Pete Fox's single and a long fly by Barney McCosky, all in the fifth inning.

Sensational Opener

The Yanks tallied once in the fifth on Joe Gordon's homer and again in the seventh on a single by Red Rolfe, an infield error, and another single by Tommy Henrich.

The first game was little short of sensational. The Yanks, playing without the services of Joe DiMaggio, who strained his back the day before, were leading 3-to-0, going into the first half of the ninth, on homers by Henrich, who scored behind Frank Crosetti, and another four-master by Gordon.

But the Tigers teed off on Marvin Breuer, with a pinch single by Earl Averill and a pinch home run by Bruce Campbell. Then Fox singled, Barney McCosky flied out, Charley Gehringer doubled down the first-base line—and they both came home on Pinky Higgins' shot past Shortstop Crosetti.

The victory went to Archie McKain, who came to the assistance of Freddie Hutchinson after he had

Slaughter's Brace Of Homers Decides Nightcap for Cooper

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 21.—The St. Louis Cardinals divided a double-header with the second place Brooklyn Dodgers today, winning the nightcap 5 to 2 on Enos Slaughter's eleventh and twelfth homers of the year after round trip blows by Joe Medwick and Joe Gallagher brought the Dodgers a 3 to 1 decision in the opener.

Mort Cooper did not allow Brooklyn a hit until two were out in the fifth inning of the second game and yielded only five over the full distance while striking out six. The even break gave the Cardinals the series, two games to one.

Ace Gives Two Hits As Giants Succumb By 6-1, 4-2 Scores

By International News Service

Cincinnati, July 21.—The Reds won a double-header from the Giants today, taking the opener, 5 to 1, as Paul Derringer hurled a two-hitter and winning the nightcap, 4 to 2.

Derringer pitched no-hit ball for seven innings, but Babe Young drove a homer for the Giants in the eighth and Joe Moore singled. Frank McCormick walloped a home run for Cincinnati in the fifth. Willis Hudlin was the losing pitcher.

Jim Turner gave eight hits in capturing the afterpiece. The Reds routed Harry Gumbert in the sixth when they counted twice.

Metz Captures Chicago Open; Has 278 Total

Oak Park, Ill., Pro Shoots 10 Under Par In $5,000 Golf

By the United Press

Chicago, July 21.—Dick Metz, Oak Park, Ill., professional, won the $5,000 Chicago Open Golf tournament today with a 72-hole aggregate score of 278, ten strokes under par for the flat, heavily-trapped Tam O'Shanter Country Club course.

Metz, on his final round this afternoon, clipped two strokes off par with a 70. Earlier he had scored a 69, despite an erratic putter, to lead the field of big-name golfers by two strokes.

Tied for second place at 279 were hard-hitting little Ben Hogan, of Texas, and Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., both professionals.

Luck With Him

Metz, needing every stroke to hold his lead, played brilliantly on his final round, but received two of golf's luckiest breaks to keep his score down. On the par 5 second hole, his second shot was a terrific hook which began a zoom for nowhere. But in the midst of its flight the ball struck a high tree in front of the green and bounced back onto the fairway.

His second stroke of luck came on the long fifteenth hole. There his second shot, a spoon from matted rough, hit the green at high speed and appeared to be headed yards beyond. But again Metz's ball bumped an obstacle—the flagstaff—and twisted to a stop on the green. Metz sunk it for a birdie 4.

Hogan Presses Metz

Pressing close behind Metz and getting closer at every hole was Hogan, hottest golfer on the course today. Hogan, five shots behind Metz as the players started their last 18 holes, blasted a 66. In shooting the final nine in 32, he scored four birdies and an eagle, giving him eight subpar holes for the 18.

Revolta, leader at the halfway point with 136, broke on the third round, shooting a 74, came back with a 69 to tie Hogan.

Big Jim Ferrier, Australian open and amateur champion, took fourth place with 280. He shot a 69 on the last round. Ralph Guldahl, United States National Open titlist, was fifth with 282.

Metz gained $1,500 for first place Hogan's share of second-place money sent him into the lead as leading money winner of the year among golf's professionals.

Chisox Sweep Double-Header From Macks

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 21.—Jimmy Dykes' Chicago White Sox swept a three-game series from the Athletics by taking both games of a double-header, 10-8 and 7-2 before 11,290 fans at Shibe Park today.

Ted Lyons, 39-year-old right-hander, turned in his seventh victory of the year for the Pale Hose in the opener, although nudged for a dozen blows, including Al Rubeling's third and Bob Johnson's nineteenth homers with two on in the first inning. Julius Solters also connected for the circuit off Porter Vaughan in the first game.

D. C. Angler Lands Marlin at Ocean City

Ocean City, Md., July 21.—Paul Drury of Washington landed the second marlin catch of the season here today. His fish weighed 46 pounds, measured 7 feet, 3 inches in length and had a tail spread of 22 inches with a 21-inch spear. The catch followed on the heels of the first marlin hooked here last Saturday. The return engagement today occurred while Mr. and Mrs. Drury and Harry Passett, another Washingtonian, were fishing with Capt. B. L. Raymond.

DiMaggio pulled a couple of muscles near his right hip while swinging at one of Detroit Rookie Harold Newhouser's pitches his last time at bat Saturday.

Alice Marble Captures Md. Net Crown

By the Associated Press

Baltimore Country Club, July 21.—Alice Marble, the world's tennis queen, annexed the Midatlantic and Maryland State women's singles title today, her second of a meet that attracted most of the Nation's ranking stars, while Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, were taking over the men's doubles crown.

Miss Marble, however, was not without anxious moments as she met a serious challenge from 20-year-old Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, who came within two games of giving her a surprise trouncing. Miss Marble won, 4—6, 6—4, 6—0.

Riggs, world's men's singles champion, and Van Horn, dropped the first set to the rising California stars, Jack Kramer, of Belvedere Gardens, and Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, but put on Pressure to win, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3, 5——7, 11—9.

Miss Marble already had shared the women's doubles title with Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, in a match played yesterday.

In the second set, Pauline cracked the champion's service three times to lead, 4-3, but each time was unable to hold an advantage by which she might have pulled out the match. Miss Marble was warming to her task, and when she broke Miss Betz's service to square it, 4-all, held her own and broke again to win, 6-4.

Eddie Foy Defeats Ralph Bogart for Shenecossett Golf Title

Holy Cross Gridman Wins by 4-3 Margin

Morning Round of 70 Gives Montclair, N. J., Youngster 3-Up Lead, Which He Maintains To Defeat District Champion in 36-Hole Final

By the Associated Press

Eastern Point, Conn., July 21.—Eddie Foy, 22-year-old halfback on the Holy Cross football squad, today won the Marston-Shenecosett trophy with a 4-and-3 victory over Ralph Bogart, 19-year-old District champion, of Washington, D. C., in the 36-hole final of the Shenecosett Men's Invitation tournament.

Foy, who lives in Pelham, N. Y., and plays most of his golf in New Jersey, finished 33 holes even with par to climax a successful four-day campaign during which he previously eliminated the defending champion, Tony Kosinski, of Bridgeport.

Foy virtually clinched the decision over Bogart in the morning round when he fired a two-under-par 70 to take a lead of 3 up.

Foy Wins Four in Row

Bogart, son of Commander I. C. Bogart, of the United States Marine Corps, put up his most stubborn resistance on the first nine holes. He won the first but Foy took the next four in a row with two birdies and two pars to go three up. Bogart then came back with three birdies in a row at the seventh, eighth and ninth to pull up level, but he bogied the tenth and Foy went out front to stay.

Foy increased his advantage to three up at lunchtime by winning the seventeenth and eighteenth with a par and a birdie. He pulled the most spectacular shot of the match on the eighteenth, where his 80-yard approach hit the pin and bounced back an inch from the edge of the cup.

Walsh Takes Pistol Title

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., July 21.—Walter Walsh, Federal Bureau of Investigation agent of Arlington, won the individual State pistol championship over 93 competitors at the new Virginia State Police range today.

To top the Cavalier tournament list, Walsh scored 182 slow fire, 197 time fire and 190 rapid fire for an aggregate 569. His 197 time fire was only two below his record established at Camp Ritchie in 1939.

Second in the championship race was M. O. Bridges, of the Metropolitan Police force, Washington, who had 177-196-191—564.

The Metropolitan Police placed first in the center fire team event in which ten teams were entered. The Washingtonians fired a 1,368 against 1,356 for the National Capital Rifle Club.

Blozis Captures Shot and Discus In Kingston Meet

By the Associated Press

Kingston, N. ., July 21.—Al Blozis, Georgetown University ace, representing the New York Athletic Club, annexed both the discus throw and the shot put today to feature the second annual Kingston Track and Field Meet.

Blozis hurled the discus 161 feet and 11½ inches to shatter last year's mark of 154 feet set by Archie Harris, of the Shore A. C., Elberon, N. J. The Georgetown star put the shot 55 feet ⅞ inch.

Johnny Woodruff, former University of Pittsburgh luminary, representing the Grand Street Boys, placed first in the 440 in 0:49.2 seconds.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Sammy West and Rene Monteagudo shared top honors yesterday in the Man of the Month contest. Points were distributed as follows:

To West, 10 points, because he drove in the Nats' first run of the second game, and because he clinched the game with his sixth-inning homer with two on base.

To Monteagudo, 10 points, because he won his ball game by holding the Browns to four runs.

To George Case, 5 points, because he made two hits in the first game, including a triple, and because he scored after beating out a bunt in the second game.

To Rick Ferrell, 4 points, because he made three hits in the first game and drove in the Nats' first run.

To Buddy Lewis, 4 points, because he made two important hits in each game.

To Jimmy Pofahl, 2 points, because he made two first game hits. The totals:

Sidney Hudson	51	Ken Chase	18
Buddy Myer	43	Sammy West	15

Woodmont, Anacostia, Golf Teams Victors

Martin McCarthy and George Miller Win Cup Play at Columbia Club; Hammett Is Triple Winner at Congressional; Manor Duos Tie

Suburban professional Ralph Beach's par round of 69 featured the annual match between Woodmont and Suburban yesterday over the former's course as the locals defeated the Baltimore club, 21½ to 8½.

Beach's 69 enabled him and George Hess to score 2½ points over Host Pro Gene Larkin and golf committee chairman, L. V. Freudberg. Larkin was only one over regulation figures with a 34-36—70.

ANACOSTIA

Anacostia's strong public links lineup scored its ninth victory in ten matches and its second of the season over the Dahlgren (Va.) Naval Officers Club, 16 to 2, at Anacostia.

Sub-70 scores included a 67 by W. W. Seay and a 69 by Pro Bill Carson, while the feature of the match was an eagle deuce by Jack Hardy on the 344-yard sixteenth hole.

COLUMBIA

The best two-man team at Columbia Country Club is still Martin F. McCarthy and George R. Miller.

The defending champions in the Cummings Cup trophy play defeated challengers Page Cornwell and Don Buckingham, 3 and 1, in the title round.

MANOR

Manor's Mixed Scotch Foursome tournament ended in a two-way tie between Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Butler, 91-24, 67, and Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Trezise, 86-18, 67. A net 69 by Mr. and Mrs. George Jones was good for a second place tie, scoring 88 witn a 19 handicap. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gibson also scored 69 net with 33-14 and they took the first prize with an 83.

Mr. Don Hutchinson and A. F. McDougald completed a three-way second place tie with 84-15, 69.

CONGRESSIONAL

C. W. Hammett topped off a big day's play at Congressional by winning the Wiffy Cox trophy tournament with 81-15, 66. Hammett also figured in a four-way tie for individual low net in the Club Breakfast foursomes, and in addition was a member of the winning team.

Dr. H. L. Smith's 78 won low gross in the Cox trophy play.

J. E. Taggart won the draw for prize in the four-way tie in the Club Breakfast play, after deadlocking at net 71 with Hammett, C. W. Dudley and Elden McFarland. Hammett, Dudley, McFarland and O. T. Smith won the foursome competition with a 352 total against an assigned score of 355.

Charlie Malone drubbed par by four shots with a 68 in a round with M. Parker Nolan. Larry Bernard and Tom Belshe at the club.

Bill Alexander won the Henry Williams Cup playoff at Capital with a 76 to Buster Mrstik's 80. They tied in the original play with identical 36-hole totals, both playing to the same handicaps.

George Borsari won low gross in the blind bogey play with a 74. The net winners were: G. W. Wood, 79-7, 72.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 21.—Somebody at the ringside the other night said, "Mike Jacobs is the only real winner of these fights. He doesn't take a punch. He doesn't have to train or worry. All he does is collect."

CONSIDINE

We're not here to weep over the plight of a gent who holds the noserings on most of the drawing cards in boxing. He's doing pretty good, considering the times. But he has no sinecure. We don't know how much cabbage he made out of the Armstrong-Jenkins fight, but he earned every sou. In fact he was underpaid.

He put it on at a time when promoters of a lot of other types of entertainment are closing down, or giving up future plans. The ticket sale was going along fine until Eddie Mead cooked up a phony about Armstrong's weight, and there came a resultant hint that the fight might not take place.

On the afternoon of the fight a perverse and taunting shower sprinkled the city, bringing the ticket sale to a dead halt again and keeping perhaps $25,000 worth of business away from the Polo Grounds. Two days before that, Jenkins left training camp, went off with his bride and fell into a nagging three-corner battle with his frau and his managers.

Fifteen minutes before the fighters were scheduled to start for the ring, Gen. Phelan harumphed into Armstrong's dressingroom and demanded that the welterweight champion take off his carefully wrapped bandages, because they had been wrapped in the sight of only a small-time lieutenant from the Jenkins camp, instead of an accredited bandage-watcher. Jenkins said "to hell with it," but the General was militantly adamant.

When Armstrong refused to humor the General, Phelan summoned now apopletic Jacobs to humor him to call off the fight. Trying to keep from exploding, a job at which he failed completely, Jacobs bellowed that 25,000 people were outside, waiting for the fight, and that they had paid $111,000 for the privilege. "Go out there and call it off yourself," Jacobs roared at the climax of the ridiculously nerve-wracking scene. Phelan marched off, as if intent on climbing into the ring and doing just that. But he didn't—thus averting being the first American brigadier-general killed since the outbreak of the war.

The fight went on, and as it turned out Jenkins' value as a gate attraction fell about 50 degrees. But it was a good, sincere show, full of honest punching and Jacobs limped off home convinced that he had presented a scrupulously honest show. However, the next morning when he came to work to pay off the fighters there was a letter from the boxing commission commanding him to hold up the purses, and announcing that the purses of Arthur Donovan and the two judges also would be held up.

The story went out, and it reeked of larceny, theft, shady practice, tanking and all the other aromatic evils attendant to holding up purses. But as it turned out, the General only wanted to be sure the boys would promise to fight in New York when they next defend their lightweight and welterweight titles, respectively. But for Mike it was just one more pound of blood pressure connected with a fight which—to an outsider—seemed to have been a piece of easy change for the promoter.

As we should have suspected all along, Jack Dempsey is fighting those rassling bums because he needs the money. He made $5,000,000 in a little more than ten years of his ring career. Saved a fair chunk of it, too. But most of his money (about $400,000 is tied up in an annuity which doesn't start paying off until 1942. He needs cash—just as the fabulously rich Yankees needed cash. So, like the Yanks, he must sell himself to the highest bidder. His closest friends doubt if he will go to South America to fight Arturo Godoy, but Dempsey can make up his mind in a hurry. And it looks as if it might mean $25,000 to him for six rounds of heavy waltzing with the Chilean—who couldn't hurt Jack with a blackjack.

It is odd how the Dempsey "comeback" has swept through the country. He has dozens of offers to fight so-called bad men of the mat racket. Jack Kearns, trying to stir up a buck or two, is out in the midlands talking to "syndicates." He has mesmerized more than one bright young reporter in the Midwest into believing that Dempsey's comeback will eventually lead him to a match against Joe Louis. Flabby, 45, short of wind, and his eye peeled only for bulbous setups, Dempsey has about as much appetite for a Louis match as he has for a triple Mickey.

The Armstrong-Jenkins fight pictures will get a tremendous showing throughout the country. They are the first to come under the new law which allows the cans of celluloid action to be shipped across State borders. Senator Barbour, New Jersey's old amateur heavyweight champ, who was one of the white hopes of Jack Johnson's time, put over the legislative action which eradicated the old law against shipping fight pictures out of the State in which they were taken. The old law was put on the books after the Johnson-Jeffries fight to circumvent a threat of race riots.

The old law carried with it a jail sentence and fine, but it was pretty generally disregarded. However, some States obeyed it. A vast new audience certainly has been opened up for fight films. With the change has come another. The exclusive contract for taking pictures of Jacobs fights has passed from Jake Dietz and Bill Duffy to Jacobs and Madison Square Garden. Ted Doglin, the Garden's publicity director, edited the Armstrong-Jenkins drama and did it so well that you don't know who slaughtered Jenkins until the fourth reel.

Bel Air to Distribute $40,000 in Purse Money During Meeting

Track Opens For 10 Days Wednesday

Four $1,000 Races Scheduled for Harford County Race Oval

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bel Air, Md., July 21.—Approximately $40,000 will be distributed by the Harford County Fair Association, Inc., during its ten-day race meet, which begins July 24 and runs through August 3. That makes an average of $4,000 daily, the largest ever offered by any small racing association in Maryland and many other States. A year ago the purses totaled nearly $35,000.

Among the several records established by the youngest racing organization in the Old Line State will be another one in the running of four $1,000 purse events. These are the Bel Air Inaugural, at seven furlongs, the opening day; the Country Life Farm Handicap, at six and one-half furlongs on July 27; the Pylesville Purse, at a mile, on July 31, and the Elray Farm Handicap, at one mile and 70 yards, on the closing day. Each is for 3-year-olds and upward.

Although only celebrating its fourth anniversary, the Bel Air Association was the first small oval (it is three-quarters of a mile while the others are a half-mile) to install the totalisator. The photo-finish camera used is similar to the one at Pimlico.

This hustling Harford County organization has invested between $150,000 and $200,000 since its incorporation to erect the racing plant. From 33 acres it has grown into nearly 100 acres and the end is not yet in sight. The grandstand will seat 3,000 persons and the clubhouse 650. Since a year ago thousands of dollars have been spent in improvements.

These improvements consist of an addition to the grandstand and clubhouse, with 32 private boxes being added to the former and nine to the latter; two new barns, each containing 50 stalls, making the total stabling room for 600 horses, and the five-furlong chute and the mile and sixteenth chute. The course is the finest of loam and the track is regarded second to none in Maryland.

G. R. Bryson, managing director, whose stable of horses is now racing at Empire City, said today that he had received stable requests for 1,300 horses, which probably constitute a record in Maryland. The over-flow will be accommodated at Timonium and Havre de Grace. He also stated the requests for badges had excelled any heretofore made.

Eight races will be run daily, the first beginning at 2 o'clock, and the steeplechase will be the third on the program. About 60 leapers are on the grounds. Seventy-five tote issuing ticket machines are installed, 25 for each straight, place and show. Practically all the old employees again will serve this year.

Hambletonian Favorite in Workout Role

Heurich Defeats Frederick, 4 to 1

Frederick, Md., July 21.—Leonard Downes pitched the Heurich Brewers, of Washington, to a 4-1 victory over his former teammates, the Frederick Hustlers, here this afternoon. The righthander scattered ten hits, and the only local tally was a circuit clout by Ray Steele in the ninth inning. Three runs in the first on a base on balls, a double and two singles won for the Brewers, who were beaten here earlier in the season.

Bees Bow Twice to Pittsburgh

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, July 21.—The Pirates today swept a twin bill with Boston, winning the first game, 5 to 3, and the second game, 16 to 2.

The nightcap was curtailed to eight innings in accordance with a Sunday law. Pittsburgh battered Posedel, (ne losing hurler; Strincevich, Javery, Piechota and Williams for 18 hits.

After tallying one apiece in the first and fourth, the Pirates rallied for seven in the fifth and five in the sixth and closed with two in the eighth.

Each team made eight hits in the opener, which was credited to Lanahan who relieved MacFayden.

Horses to Watch At Belair Track

Wayriel—Closed like the wind in recent race after getting off poorly. Should win here.

Salian—Sharp sprinter who should find the right company in a field at this course.

Royal Business—Queen of small tracks has all her speed and may take a couple of those $1,000 purses.

Aster Princess—Victim of poor ride and came back to stumble at turns. Don't give up on this one.

The Swagman—Sharp as he ever was and will be favored by this longer track.

Repeat—Taken in hand when beaten off. Should take care of excellent company at this session.

Little Mistress—Rushed off feet last Saturday. Will win when she gets a well-rated ride.

Cubs and Phils Split 2 Games Before 15,000

Chicago Drops 1st, 8-2, Wins 2d, 8-5, With Jake Mooty Pitching

By International News Service

Chicago, July 21.—The Chicago Cubs today halved a twin bill with Philadelphia, capturing the nightcap, 8 to 5, and dropping the opener, 8 to 2, before 15,000 fans.

Bennie Warren, Philadelhia receiver, and Hank Leiber, of the Cubs, staged a slugging duel in the second game. Warren homered in the second with one on, and again in the fourth. Leiber smashed four-baggers in the fourth and seventh, the latter with one on. Johnny Rizzo completed the Phillies' home-run activities by smashing one into the centerfield bleachers in the first stanza to score one ahead. Jake Mooty was the winning hurler, and Si Johnson, who replaced Brown in the fourth, was the loser.

Philadelphia sewed up the first game in the sixth frame by knocking out Vern Olsen, Cub southpaw, with four hits and four runs. Five runs and ten hits were scored off the rookie before he was replaced by Bill Lee. Joe Marty ended the Phils' scoring by socking a ninth-inning homer to bring in Heinie Mueller. Hugh Mulcahy, holding the Cubs to six hits, was not scored upon until the sixth.

Sergt. Jasper Post Takes First Place

Rout Cathedral Nine, 16 to 4, In American Legion Series

Blasting 15 hits off a pair of National Cathedral pitchers, the Sergt. Jasper nine moved into first place in the American Legion Junior League yesterday with a 16-to-4 route of the Cathedral team. The victory assured the Jaspermen of at least a tie in the second-half race.

Meanwhile, Costello Post, behind the four-hit pitching of Harrell, continued to remain in the running by scoring a convincing 12-to-2 triumph over Potomac. Harrell fanned 11 in recording his victory.

American Grid Loop Opens Sept.27

Chicago, July 21 (AP).—The American Football League announced at a schedule-making meeting today that its season would open September 15 with at least six teams in the circuit.

The league, as set up now, consists of the St. Louis Gunners, Kenosha (Wis.) Cardinals, Milwaukee Chiefs, Chicago Indians, Dayton Bombers and Cincinnati. All of thees cities, except Milwaukee, had teams in last year's league. Louisville, Columbus, Ohio, and Los Angeles were represented a year ago, but will have no team in the circuit this season.

Several club owners attending today's meeting were present at a recent conference here to consider formaiton of a "new" American League. League officials said, however, that this plan apparently had fallen through.

Mid-Atlantic Softball Title Game Tonight

Standard Linen Plays Tru-Blu at Ballston; Game Rated Toss-up

Tru-Blu and Standard Linen meet tonight at 8 p. m., at Ballston Ball Park, for the softball championship of the Mid-Atlantic area. Tru-Blu entered the finals in impressive fashion, having defeated the Oklahoma Cowboys, of Enid, Okla., 1 to 0, and the Powers Builders by 5 to 0. The last game resulted in a no-hit no-run performance by 16-year-old Billy Sullivan, of Tru-Blu.

Larry Zanellotti has sparked Tru-Blu's fielding and batting, with Larrick, Coksey and Mills also outstanding.

Standard Linen reached the title round by a much more difficult route, eliminating Trenton Democrats, of Baltimore, 4 to 3, and upsetting the tournament favorite, I. B. M., Wednesday, with a last-inning splurge, 5 to 4. Bump Simonds has been hurling excellent ball for Standard Linen, while M. Green, A. Zinnnamon and J. Singer have all been consistet hitters. The game appears to be a toss-up.

The winning team will be presented with a huge 35-inch trophy and each team meber with a gold medal. The losing team will receive a 21-inch trophy and the runner-up team members will each receive a bronze medal.

A Tri-State League game between the Posner Brothers softball team and Glen Echo will precede the main event. The first game will strt at 7:5 p. m.

Publinx Qualifying Mark Expected Today

192 Survivors of Original Field of 2,601 Burn Up Course in Practice; Jennings Posts 67; Players Shoot at Record of 139

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 21.—If practice round scores are a criterion, a new qualifying round record may be established in the nineteenth annual National public links golf championship which opens over the Rackham municipal course here shortly after dawn tomorrow.

Today the 192 survivors of the original field of 2,601 who played in sectional events continued to burn up the flat, heavily trapped Rackham layout.

The best reported score was a four-under-par 67 by Louis Jennings, Portland, Ore., first public links player to hold the Oregon amateur championship. Jennings teamed with Smiley Quick, Los Angeles, Southern California amateur champion, to score a three-up victory over Andrew Szwedko, Pittsburgh, defending champion, and Al Leach, Cleveland, 1938 victor, in a West versus East four-ball engagement.

Quick, who established a new record of 66 for the Rackham course last Friday, had a 69 today. He and Jennings fashioned a best ball round of 64. Jennings went out in 32, three under par, and was aided by his partner on two holes. Leach shot 71 and Szwedko 75.

The public links qualifying record of 139 is shared by George Aulbach, Boston, who set the mark in the first meet at Toledo in 1922, and Don Errickson, Alhambra, Calif., who equaled it in 1937 at San Francisco.

Two players reported 68's today. One was Loio Palenapa, Honolulu, who was helped by a hole-in-one on the par three, 225-yard sixteenth. A No. 3 iron shot in to a cross wind hit 10 feet in front of the pin and bounded into the cup. G. W. Duvall, jr., Kansas City, scored the other 68.

Palenapa equaled par of 35 going out and came back in 33, three under regulation figures.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lawrenceville, Va., July 21.—Behind the nine-hit pitching of Otis Printz the Cameo Furniture team of Washington, D. C. handed the locals here today a 9-to-5 setback.

Feller Takes 15th; Indians Win 2 Games

Bosox Drop Opener, 3-2; Second, 2-0; Dobson Hurls Shutout

By International News Service

Boston, July 21.—Behind the brilliant pitching of Bobby Feller and Joe Dobson, the Cleveland Indians today twice scalped the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 2 and 2 to 0.

A ninth-inning single by Hal Trosky in the opener, which scored Ben Chapman with the game-winning run, enabled Feller to register his fifteenth win of the season. Feller allowed five hits and struck out eight.

In the abbreviated nightcap, Dobson blanked the Red Sox with seven bingles. Fritz Ostermueller allowed the Indians four hits, two coming in the fateful seventh when Cleveland scored their two runs.

A capacity crowd of 33,000 fans watched the double-header.

Grant Shines In Exhibition

relentlessly from the baselines, was sure of aim in the forecourt and scored repeatedly on volleying at the net. He experience no trouble in putting away Hunt's usually effective drop shots for clean placements. McNeill had the highest number of placements of the afternoon in a single set, scoring ten against Hunt. Gil slapped away four but hurt his chances with three double faults at inopportune times.

Grant, in both matches with Hunt, was simply too steady. Moreover, he was amazing veteran tennis followers with the best offensive game he has ever shown here. Still the infallible retriever, Grant yesterday was something more than just a defensive player. Occasionally he was forcing Hunt and four times caught Gil flatfooted with sharply angled drop shots.

Grant, seeded fourth in the Seabright invitation opening today, impressed D. C. T. A. officials with his form, and several were of the opinion that he should make plenty of trouble for Bobby Riggs and Welby Van Horn at Seabright. Grant is seeded fourth in the tourney.

McNeill left immediately after his match with Hunt, opening the program, to return to Baltimore for a mixed doubles exhibition between him nad Nina Brown, of England, and National Champions Alice Marble and Riggs. From Baltimore he was to go to Ohio for a week's rest before returning to the tournament circuit at Southampton next week.

Klein, Flood And Miller Are Victors

Washington-Packard And DGS Also Figure In Deadlock; Plaza Tile Scores by 9-8

Five teams moved into a first-place tie in the second-half race of the National City A League as a result of four games yesterday. Klein's Tavern, J. C. Flood, Miller Furniture, Packard-Washington and D. G. S. were locked at the top. All except D. G. S. won yesterday.

With Bill Liggett hurling four-hit ball, Klein's Tavern nosed out D. G. S., 3-1, in what amounted to the feature game of the day. While Liggett was subduing the Grocers, Charley Kendall, erstwhile Tech High star, hammered out a double and triple in four trips to the plate to pace the winners' attack.

The Flood Plumbers continued their excellent performances yesterday with a 4-2 triumph over Small Motor. Benny Steiner, former Central star, crashed out three timely hits while Talburtt and Burrows were throwing a five-hit game at the Motormen.

In a game featured by Claude Bradley's two-hit pitching, Packard-Washington defeated the Orange Disc nine, 3-0.

Miller Furniture's powerful team had a comparatively easy time with Marvin's Credit, winning, 10-3. Miller got off to a six-run lead and was never headed. Birch meanwhile was victimizing the Creditmen with five-hit pitching.

In the class B division Plaza Tile & Marble continued its recent outstanding performances with a 9-5 triumph over Washington Home Improvement.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Notice of Limited Partnership. No. 114. Notice is hereby given that the partners hereinafter named, now being all of the general and special partners of a limited partnership formed pursuant to the laws of the State of New York, and desiring to continue to do business in the District of Columbia as a limited partnership, have filed in the Office of the Clerk of the District Court for the District of Columbia a certificate of limited partnership which contains the terms of such limited partnership. The name of the firm under which such partnership is to be conducted is SMITH, BARNEY & CO. The general nature of the business intended to be transacted is that of underwriters, distributors and custodians of, and brokers and dealers in, stocks, bonds and other securities and investments of every kind and character, including grain and other commodities. The names of all the general and special partners interested therein, distinguishing which are general and which are special partners, and their respective places of residence, are as follows: (General Partners) Joseph R. Swan, 435 E. 52d st., N. Y., N. Y.; Henry E. Butler, P. O. Box 111, Red Bank, N. J.; Radcliffe Cheston, jr., Oreland, Pa.; Charles S. Cheston, Skippack pike, Whitemarsh, Pa.; J. Ford Johnson, jr., Ambassador Hotel, Park ave. and 51st st., N. Y., N. Y.; John W. Cutler, 58 E. 80th st., N. Y., N. Y.; Edwin A. Fish, Locust Valley, L. I., N. Y.; Burnett Walker, 1021 Park ave., N. Y., N. Y.; Charles B. Harding, Rumson, N. J.; Edward B. Smith, jr., Sweetwaters, Providence rd., Edgemont, Pa.; John W. Castles, Convent, N. J.; Irving D. Fish, Fox Run lane, Greenwich, Conn.; Fred E. Koechlein, 641 Union ave., Elizabeth, N. J.; W. Edwin Williams, 900 Charlotte rd., Plainfield, N. J.; Edward C. Sayers, Washington lane, Meadowbrook, Pa.; Ralph B. Johnson, 50 E. 10th st., N. Y., N. Y.; William Barclay Harding, Holmdel, N. J.; Harcourt Amory, Ipswich, Mass.; Ogden Phipps, Roslyn, L. I., N. Y.; J. Ritchie Kimball, R. F. D. No. 2, Morristown, N. J.; Karl Weisheit, 221 Boulevard, Mountain Lakes, N. J.; Phillip W. Brown, Haddon rd., Faradale, N. Y.; Sidney F. Tyler, Redal, Montgomery County, Pa.; (Special Partners) Philemon Dickinson, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia County, Pa.; Edwin A. Fish, Locust Valley, L. I., N. Y. The amount of capital which each special partner shall have contributed to the common stock is as follows: Philemon Dickinson, $500,000; Edwin A. Fish, $500,000. The period at which the partnership is to commence and the period at which it is to terminate are as follows: The partnership formed at the close of business on December 31, 1937, shall continue from and after the close of business on June 30, 1940, for the term of three years and six months to and including December 31, 1943, and its membership shall be constituted as set forth herein from and after June 30, 1940, and shall continue to and including December 31, 1943, subject to earlier termination upon certain contingencies set forth in the aforesaid certificate. Filing the certificate as aforesaid and this publication are occasioned by the retirement from said Limited Partnership, prior to the opening of business on July 1, 1940, of Jay Cooke, theretofore a special partner.

THAT WAS QUITE AN EXPERIENCE IN ERUDITION—PLAYING A SHOW IN A SCHOOLHOUSE!
I WONDER WHAT KIND OF JOINT WE'LL PLAY HERE IN KIMONA.
WE ARE PLAYING IN REAL THEATRE INSTEAD OF SCHOOLHOUSE AND TOWN HALLS!!
YES, AND IT'S A REAL OLD SMALL-TIME VAUDEVILLE THEATRE!
WHY, TOBY, HOW CAN YOU TELL THAT?
STAGE DOOR
TAKE A LOOK AT THOSE SIGNS!
DON'T TELL US WHAT YOU DID ON THE BIG TIME. WE DON'T MAKE GOOD HERE
DO YOUR 4 AND EAT YOUR HASH.
DON'T SEND YOUR LAUNDRY OUT TILL AFTER THE FIRST SHOW

THIS IS JANE ARDEN, MRS. BIEGLOW—SHE THINKS SHE KNOWS ONE OF YOUR ROOMERS—
SURE, WHAT SORT OF LAD IS HE, TO WAIT FOR HER TO CALL?
IT'S A GIRL, MRS. BIEGLOW—ON THE SECOND FLOOR, RIGHT ACROSS FROM ME—
SO NOW IT'S YOU ASKIN' QUESTIONS ABOUT HER—SHE'S A NICE GIRL AND MINDS HER OWN BUSINESS—WHICH IS MORE'N I CAN SAY FOR SOME—
SO THERE HAVE BEEN OTHERS ASKING ABOUT HER?
AND LITTLE GOOD IT DID THEM—I'LL NOT HAVE A BUNCH O' FOREIGNERS PROWLING ABOUT MY HOUSE—
AND THEY WERE FOREIGNERS? WELL, I GUESS WE'D BETTER BE GOING—THANKS, MRS. BIESLOW!
WHAT? WHY, WE'VE ONLY JUST COME—

C. B. S. had made available its full network facilities throughout the country—including, of course, WJSV in Washington—to the Nation's campaign to build the Army up to the greatest peacetime strength in history.

Starting next Saturday over Columbia you'll hear a series of broadcasts in which the Army will give an informal, human interest account of itself in the persons of officers, enlisted men and members of their families. Recruits, mess sergeants, technicians, infantrymen, artillerymen, flyers and what have you are to have their moment on the air waves to tell of Army life.

And it isn't going to be a solemn affair by any means. As witness the fact that Ray Perkins—it's now Maj. Perkins, no less, of the Army reserves—is to be master of ceremonies. Comedian Perkins can be pretty well guaranteed to make things lively and humorous.

A regular feature of the programs will be music by the band of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point.

The idea for the series, which WJSV will carry each Saturday from 12:30 to 1 p. m., grew out of the interest shown in the Army's recruiting drive as a result of sport announcements on which radio station and the Army have been cooperating for the past few weeks.

An example of conservative feminine tracts at their best is shown in today's box. Mrs. Steuyvesant Wainwright played the hand with Walter Malowan during the Eastern mixed team-of-four championship, which they eventually won with their teammates.

Where a man might have impetuously doubled West's desperate one no-trump takeout, Mrs. Wainwright cleverly passed. She was not certain that a game could be made her way of the table, but if it could she was reasonably certain of setting the adversaries as much as she and Malowan could win by playing the hand, for the opponents, unhappily for them, were vulnerable.

If she were aggressive and doubled, she risked having her partner take out or allowing East and West to escape to a safter suit contract.

As the play developed, Mrs. Wainwright's reason proved sound; she and Malowan defeated West three tricks for 500 points, which was more than they could have made at a game. East would also have a better chance at two clubs, even doubled.

Against one no trump, the defenders won five diamonds, three hearts and a club.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

EVERYTHING HAPPENS IN RAINBOW! The Rainbow Room is currently just like The Post city room—busting with news. Violinist Durward Bowersox has just been married to luffly Georgia Meem. They ran up to Manassas, Va., the other day and were wedded quietly. Durward plays in the New Bavarian in the afternoons and in the Rainbow in the eves, so something tells us he won't have time for an official honeymoon. . . . Singer-Drummer Lew Berman will leave Rainbow August 3 to devote his full time to his law practice. Lew's been a barrister for some time, but incognito. He'll vacation in Florida for a month before settling down to full time in the office. . . . Leader Milton Davis wants us to tell the Starlight Roof maestro, Arthur Herbert, that the Rainbow Room golf team will be glad to meet the Starlight team any day except Wednesdays. But the Rainbowites want to choose the course. (Wait'll the Starlight boys see that Argyle course. Tee, hee! They'll think they're in the Alps.) . . . The Starlight golfers should also call up Arthur Todd, one-man golf team of the King Cole Room. Warning, don't bet more than a nickel with Arthur.

"JIVIN' JACK" SCHAEFFER, head music man at the Casino Royal

"TWO, TWO, JUMP FOR FOUR" is a new study in hot rhythm that'll make you think "Tuxedo Junction" is a sweet tune. It's the brain child of Harry Echols, River Bend's talented sax punisher. Leader George Stein says, "Harry goes Gertrude Stein when he starts to write music."

NEW TODAY. Lotus. Manager Dick Lamm poked his head out of the air-cooled Lotus and said, "We'll have a 'Winter Wonderland Revue' with the new Earl Lindsay Frostettes." But, truly, the Lindsay prettties will represent snow, rain, sleet and other cooling ideas in their "Parade of the Elements." There'll also be Lynn and Dering, of musical comedy, and Specialty Dancers Marcia Harris, Muriel Brunzell and Joan Milan.

Maiyfair. "Mouse" Garner's Trio opens today with Singer Ruth McCullough, who's just out of high school, but warbles like a Stork Club grad. Frank Flanigan doubles smartly on bass and vocals and Sammy Richardson handles the sax-clarinet chore.

Casino Royal. The "Hollywood Starlet Revue" will begin to twinkle this evening. All of the starlets are also specialty dancers. Also Russ Le Beau whom you'll remember as the boy who drinks cocktails standing on his head. His act is one of the best of its type. Band Leader Jack Schaeffer will uncork some new rhythm trickery and we're hoping that Pianist Felix Zimmer will unroll a solo or two.

Shoreham Terrace. Savoy and Regina, glorified hand balancers from the Hotel New Yorker, will be the only newcomers on the Terrace. Gautier's Steeplechase and smoothie dancers, St. Clair and Dare, are so popular that they've had to stay.

THREE CHEERS FOR COL. LENNIE SCHLOSS, of Glen Echo, for coming out with those big ads squelching the preposterous "snake yarns" that have been going the rounds. We've heard ten versions of the story, each sillier than the other and involving everything but alligators. The only way to cope with such nonsense is to force it out in the open and slap it down, as Col. Schloss has done.

ANCHORS AWAY! Matt Windsor of the Anchor Room will begin a four-week vacation August 1. He rates it after an almost solid two years in Anchor. It's possible that a topflight New York pianist will sub for Matt while he's away. . . . Mixologist "Chuck" O'Donnell will also start vacationing August 1 by going to a hospital and getting his tonsils out. . . . "Chuck's" brother, Ben O'Donnell, who mixes 'em in the Carlton cocktail lounge, is the proud papa of a baby boy, already christened Frederick Norman O'Donnell.

ESQUIRE STARS. Billy Brill, said to have the only "triple voice" in the country, opens at the Club Esquire this eve. Billy sings tenor, barytone and bass, a large order . . . Lester Lee, Esquire's brilliant violinist, has been in several motion pictures, played with Lionel and John Barrymore, Norma Shearer, John Boles and Al Shean.

SOLID SENDING. Neptune Room. That oldie, "Sheik of Araby," made into a modern divebomber by Milt Herth's organing, Morty Jacobs' flashy piano work and the maddening drumming of Jack Conner.

Lounge Riviera. Those vivid interludes by trumpeter Artie Humes, guitarist Ray Donahue and bassist Jerry Rhoades. They'll make you sit up and take notice—a lot.

Hi Hat. Tito Rochero's bright vocaling of "Waikiki" with guitar accompaniment. Tito looks like a Hawaiian, but we're told he's Cuban.

Nightingale. Rod Raffell's new musical spelling bee, "Singaspell," a novelty that gives dancers a chance to match wits with the Nightingale band.

RUSTIC CABIN NOVACHORD. That most versatile of new instruments, the novachord, has been installed in the Rustic Cabin out near Bladensburg. The novachord is dozens of instruments rolled up into one and you'll enjoy its novelty while cooling off at the Rustic Cabin.

Gay Nineties. Al Oddone's new arrangement of "South of the Border" with plentah of maraca rhythm. It turns "S. O. T. B." from a romance into a flirtation.

TIRED, HOT AND HUNGRY? Then run yourself right down to the Harrington Tavern and get some refreshment. You'll forget there is such a thing as a thermometer . . . Or bowl out to O'Donnell's Farms where it's 15 degrees cooler than in town, and get some golden fried chicken and roastin' ears. Yum-m! . . . Or head Del Rio way and fiddle with a luscious planked steak while listening to Ray Bradford's fancy fiddling.

MARYLAND GARDENS LASSIES. Nadine's Coeds at Maryland Gardens is the only all-girl orchestra around Washington. But they're so clever that they don't need to ask odds from the all-man bands . . . There's a girl emcee, too,—Yvonne Logan, a beautiful and bouncing lass whose showmanship reminds of the Sophie Tucker of y'ars ago.

Pastor Thanks Doctors, Nurses At Services for His Recovery

Dr. John E. Briggs Praises Both Earthly And Divine Physicians at Special Rites; Several Hundred Brave Heat to Attend

Because he was "the most thankful man in Washington" for having regained his health, Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor of Fifth Baptist Church for 31 years, yesterday praised Divine and earthly physicians at a special service.

Several hundred worshipers braved one of the year's hottest days to see Dr. Briggs greet Drs. R. Arthur Hooe and George R. Sorrell at the chancel, and in the sermon pay warm tribute to them, the nurses, and the Divine hand that guided them.

He also thanked the congregation for having stayed by him so loyally since that day—just a year ago yesterday—when he found himself in a hospital bed instead of at the Baptist World Alliance Convention in Atlanta, Ga., as he had planned.

Picture of Health Now

Now a picture of health, Dr. Briggs assured his parishioners that "the Lord has been mighty good to me" and asked them to "make the most of life, make peace with God, so we may be ready to live or die."

"I prize their friendship," he said of the many physicians he has known, and likened their services to those of the "beloved physician," St. Luke. Many doctors have "the soul of a saint and the insight of a scientist" and modern hospitals carry out the Good Samaritan's story, he said.

In an unscheduled phase of the program, Dr. Briggs disclosed that yesterday was Dr. Hooe's birthday, and presented him with greeting cards on behalf of himself and Mrs. Briggs and one of the church's Bible classes.

Doctor Lauds Former Patient

Responding, Dr. Hooe expressed the hope that his former patient would be spared for many more years of service, and pointed out that throughout his sickness ordeal the clergyman had been "cooperative, submissive and totally unafraid."

Songs, psalms and prayers of thanksgiving were part of the program, in which the Rev. J. Herrick Hall, new junior pastor and minister of music, assisted.

2,000 at Outing Of Southeast Business Group

Pleasure was the business of the day for the Southeast Business Men's Association on its twelfth annual outing yesterday at Marshall Hall. The crowd of members, their families and friends was estimated at more than 2,000 by Louis F. Frick, secretary.

Two boatloads went down on the City of Washington, Wilson Line steamer, in the morning and afternoon, while many others made the trip by auto. Numerous persons came back with unexpected cargo—for 300 prizes were awarded. Husband-calling contests, candle races and many other competitions brought outl spurts of energy in spite of the heat. Alex J. Berlin was chairman.

Recreation Center Opened To Sponsors

Church, Civic Groups Attend Ceremonies At Hampshire House

Men and women from the 11 churches and other organizations sponsoring Hampshire House, new neighborhood recreational center at 1105 New Hampshire avenue northwest, were guests yesterday at "open house" ceremonies.

While they regretted missing the youngsters who frequent the center on week-days, the guests were taken on a tour of the three-story dwelling, and expressed gratification at the progress being made.

The project, which is a boon to an area with a shortage of recreational facilities, was begun on July 15 under the sponsorship of the Guild of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, with the cooperation of other congregations, groups and individual citizens.

Miss Bessie Baker has been named full-time director; Mrs. James C. Byrnes is board chairman; Mrs. Paul Gross, treasurer, and Miss Margaret Nicol, acting secretary.

E. H. Maytag Dies

Newton, Iowa, July 21 (AP).—E. H. Maytag, chairman of the board of directors and president of the Maytag Co., died Saturday at his summer home in Lake Geneva, Wis., company officials announced here tonight. He was 56.

Girl Scout Head Lauds Playgrounds

A backyard playground contest, sponsored by the Recreation Department, Traffic Advisory Council, and District WPA, has been commended by Miss Eleanor Durrett, Girl Scout director.

"The girl scouts of the District of Columbia consider the backyard playground one of the most beneficial projects undertaken in the District of Columbia in many years," she said. "The program should help keep children off dangerous streets."

Entries in the contest may be sent to the recreation department of the Force School, 1740 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Entries close July 31.

Welfare School Joins Columbia U.

The New York School of Social Work, which has 33 graduates connected with agencies in Washington, has affiliated with Columbia University, it was announced yesterday.

The new status of the school, which was founded in 1898 as the first school for social workers in the United States, was described in a joint statement from Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the University, and Morris Hadley, chairman of the committee on the school of social work of the Community Service Society.

Henceforth degrees will be awarded by Columbia to graduates of the school, and there will be greater flexibility in the exchange of credit between the two institutions, it was pointed out.
